"Not there," said the spirit. Then where shall we fly. To the marsion a of Princes that for conquests do sigh; Crawsy to alloons that with beauties are filled— That never by winter's cold north winds are chilled. "No no," said the spirit. Then where shall we go, That on us this bright tro sure thou may est blow. Shall we go to the land of the far distant west. In quest of this treasure, that il. are we may rest.

Oh, where shall we go. The secret unfold ; If its not found in diamends, or gittering gold. Then we may sit down in grief and despair, C'erwheimed by the dark pall of treuble and care There is but one pisce where it is found in full bloom Par away from this world, death and the tomb, And it is the place that our Maker has given. To enjoy it supremely-it's Heaven-it's Heaven.
