

fore, likely to result... upon whom should the loss fall? Certainly it will not be contended that it should be thrown on innocent parties who have had no agency in the business. It is surely more just and reasonable that those who are to receive the profits should bear the losses...

The trade of the West, and the lakes, similar intimation, and to take such other preliminary steps as may seem proper and right. I desire to call your attention to the condition in the public grounds surrounding the State Arsenal. It has occurred to me that this eligible spot should be enclosed with a good fence, be planted with shade trees, and otherwise improved. As at present exposed, it makes rather a barren and cheerless space between the town and the capitol. If properly enclosed and beautified, it will add much to the appearance of both. A due respect for the memory of the generous donor of this valuable piece of ground, not less than a just regard for the appearance of the seat of government, would seem to require its proper improvement. I respectfully commend this subject to your favorable consideration.

Recent difficulties in a neighboring State have suggested the existence of a deficiency in our State laws, in reference to the conveyance of persons held involuntarily in servitude, from one State to another. The Pennsylvania statute of 1790 gave all persons passing through or sojourning in the State for a brief period the right to hold their domestic slaves. The act of 1847 repealed this provision, and the repealing sections of last session did not reinstate it. I, therefore, respectfully recommend that provision be made for the transit of these domestics through the limits of this Commonwealth. Such a law seems to be contemplated by the constitution of the United States, and to be suggested by those rates of comity which should exist between the States...
