information we possess from those who have been in the way of raising and feed-ing the currot, agrees with this statement. The only thing that we cannot understand, is considering the value of the crop as hav-ing been fully established, that our farmers do not cultivate it more generally—that all of them who have stock, do not, with all of them who have stock, do not, with rolling,' is the motto for all-politicians

The amazing advantages will at once the they grow (in imagination.) But there is apparent to the reflecting farmer. To one thing certain, we must turn to Clay those who will not think on the subject at last, not politically speaking. Yes, dear enough to see its importance, I recommend breathren, time rolls on, and it won't be to try a patch :' It is lamentable to see so but a little while before we shall be rolled many farmers plowing for a week, and into our graves.
