

"Some of our leading hotel-keepers are considering the policy of employing female waiters."

Good news for you, pale-face seamstress! Throw your thumbs at the heads of your penurious employers; put on your neatest and plainest dress; see that your feet and fingers are immaculate, and then rush en masse for the situation, offering every white jacket in Yankeeedom. Stipulate with your employer, for leave to carry in the pocket of your French apron a pistol loaded with cranberry sauce, to plaster up the mouth of the first cockroach who considers it necessary to preface his request for an omelette, with "My dear." Should he close his impertinent fingers (unnecessarily) over your digits, when you are handing him a cup of coffee, you can very quietly tip the contents into his vest and shirt bosom; apologizing for the same with as much gravity as you can muster. If in my opinion one such will be sufficient; if not you can vary the order of exercises by appointing him with a "hasty plate of soup" at dinner.

Always make a moustache wait twice as long as you do a man who wears a clean, presentable lip. Should he undertake to expatiate your slippers by "a fee," tell him that hotel bills are generally settled at the clerk's office, except by very verdant travellers.

Should you see a female at the table, digging down to the bottom of the salt cellar, as if the top stratum was too plumb; or ordering ninety-nine messes, (turning aside from each with affected airs of disgust,) or rolling up the whites of her eyes, declaring that she never sat down to a dinner-table before minus "finger glasses," you may be sure that her aristocratic blood is nourished, at home, on herrings and brown bread. When a masculine comes in with a white vest, flashy neck-tie, extraordinary looking black trousers, several yards of gold chain festooned over his breast-works, and a mammoth seal ring on his little finger, you may be sure that his tailor and his laundress are both on the anxious seat; and whenever you see travellers of either sex pernegiating the country in their "best bib and tucker," you can set them down for unmitigated faubs, for the "quality" can't afford to be so extravagant.

I dare say you'll get sick of so much pretension and humbug. Never mind, it is better than to be stitching yourselves into a consumption over sixty penny shirts; you'll have your fun out of it. This would be a horrid stupid world, if everybody was sensible.

I think my starry day, for the share of fools a kind Providence sends in my way; but your feet ache to excruciating pain, standing behind the chairs!—Just lend me your French apron and slippers, and see how I'll serve up the 'saucy' to their dishes and spill things over by accident, when they don't behave themselves. If I don't teach them good manners, in the cracking of an egg-shell, they will be the first of my pups who ever graduated dunces.

CURRAN'S INGENUITY.—A farmer, attending a fair with a hundred pounds in his pocket, took the precaution of depositing it in the hands of the landlord of the public house at which he stopped. Having occasion for it shortly afterwards, he resorted to mine host for the bailment, but the landlord, too deep for the countryman, wondered what hundred was meant, and was quite sure no such sum had been lodged in his hands by the astonished rustic. After ineffectual appeals to the recollection, and finally to the honor of Bardolph, the farmer appealed to Curran for advice.

"Have patience, my friend," said the counsel; "speak to the landlord civilly—tell him you are convinced you must have left your money with some other person. Take a friend with you, and lodge with him another hundred in the presence of your friend, and come to me."

We must imagine, and not commit to paper the vociferations of the honest dupe, at such advice; however, moved by the rhetoric or authority of the worthy counsel, he followed his advice, and returned to his legal friend.

"And now, sir, I don't see as I am to be better off for this, if I get my second hundred again; but how is it to be done?"

"Go and ask him for it when he is alone," said the counsel.

"Ay, sir, but asking won't do, I'm afraid, without my witness, at any rate."

"Never mind, take my advice," said the counsel, "do as I bid you, and return to me."

The farmer returned with his hundred, glad to find that safe again in his possession.

"Now, sir, I suppose I must be content; but I don't see I'm much better off."

"Well then," said the counsel, "now take your friend with you, and ask the landlord for the hundred pounds your friend saw you leave with him."

We need not add, that the wily landlord found that he had been taken off his guard, while our honest friend returned to thank his counsel exultingly with both hundreds in his pocket.

"Bismarck," said Mr. Slow, solemnly, as he stood with his back towards the grate; "Bismarck, have you been to meeting?"

"Yes, sir," said Amibrecht, stoutly, "I've been to the Universalist."

"Well, my son, I ain't like a good many fathers that don't want their children to go anywhere but just where they say. No my son, I ain't one of these. Toleration is my motto—largest liberty and all that, that our forefathers fit and died for. Yes, my son, go where you please to meeting; I don't care; only this I will say, that if I don't see you going to that meeting again, I'll flog you within an inch of your life!"

LIBERTIA.—A party is being formed in Pennsylvania, to carry with them to Liberia a steam engine and saw mill, to be located at Monrovia, the Capital of Liberia.

Fellow Citizens.—When in the course of human events, the editor of a newspaper is compelled to get a new supply of printing paper, is it not right that he should call upon those whom he has been supplying with mental food, who are in arrears, to pay up? Shall it be said that in this age of railroad accidents and mint juleps, when every body is doing a smashing business, that a country editor should order only two bundles at a time?—Forbid it Heaven! We know not what course others may take, but as for us, pay us wherewith to purchase a summer's supply, or expect costs.

P. S.—Remittances may be made by mail at our risk.

In Troy last week, a young man was fined $3 for tickling a married lady. The man pleaded common usage, in justification; but the lady argued (and she had the best of it) that if it was common usage, it was not common right, and that every lady had a right to choose her own tickler.

You say, Mrs. Smith, that you have lived with the defendant for eight years. Does the court understand from that, that you are married to him?"

"In course it does."

"Have you a marriage certificate?"

"Yes, your honor, three on 'em—two gals and a boy."

Verdict for the Plaintiff!

Greatness may procure a man a tomb, but goodness alone can deserve an epitaph.

One should take care not to grow too earnest and wise, for one of the most salutary pleasures of life is laughter.

Why is a tight boot like a brisk shower of rain? Because it makes the corn grow.
