the waters of the South. One spirit, one mind animated the people. They saw their country threatened with subjection to the will of a tyrant Ministry on the one hand—stripped of its rights and privileges: while on the other, war—desolating war—stared them in the face, with all its horrors. But a spirit of resistance, deep and strong, is abroad; the crisis is passed; all is staked upon the issue of the contest.

This was an age of heroes. They fearlessly bared their bosoms to the storm, to avert the destiny which threatened the country they loved. The struggle was long and bloody; all the evils which humanity can endure, they suffered. But they shrank not, nor faltered. The polar star of their hope still rose above the troubled horizon, to light them on, as the cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night did the children of Isreal in the wilderness.—At times it is indeed obscured by the clouds of defeat; but they vanquish not, despair not of the result. Their cause is approved of Heaven, and cheered by its smiles, they persevere. The Eagle of Freedom flutters aloft over the prostrate Lion of the boasted power of Britain. Peace crowns the efforts of patriotism, and Liberty, the first born of Heaven, is the reward of the toils of the oppressed. Its banner is yet floating over us, and palsied be the hand that would dishonor it.

Our fathers of the Revolution laid the foundation and commenced the superstructure—leaving to future generations the task of completing the edifice they so auspiciously began. Their difficulties and dangers ended not with the close of the war. They found themselves, it is true, independent of British rule—free from the oppressions that had impelled them to take up arms. But this was all. Chaos was before them, an exhausted country was around them. Devastation had marked the foot of the invaders; the arts of peace had been neglected, and the country was without resources. The colonies were held together only by the recollection of common sufferings, and common dangers. The instrument which connected them was but as a rope of sand. A government was to be formed, and institutions moulded; conflicting interests and prejudices to be harmonized and a new order of things established. But the same over-ruling Providence that guided them through a long and fearful struggle, was with them still. As He gave them valor in war, so He gave them wisdom in council. They saw and fully appreciated the dangers to which their liberated country was exposed. The wise men of the nation—many of those who had periled their "lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honors," for the achievement of its liberties, were called by the people to devise ways and means to meet the crisis. They proved themselves equal to the emergency, and the American Constitution was the result of their labors.

That instrument—the perfection of human wisdom, as applied to the formation of government—yet remains in its original strength and purity—the palladium of our liberty—the admiration of the world.—Under it, the union of the States was effected. Since then, their progress has been onward and upward. From thirteen, they have become thirty one, and the three million of inhabitants have increased to upwards of twenty three million. That this Union, so fraught with national and individual blessings—so necessary for the protection and preservation of civil, political, and religious liberty, may be preserved in its integrity, is the prayer of every patriot heart.

After the formation of the government, order soon came out of confusion, and what before was without form and void, assumed shape and fair proportions. Peace continued within our borders for over a quarter of a century, interrupted only by slight difficulties with France, the Barbary Powers, and an occasional conflict with the Savages. But England had never, in fact, conceded full independence; she had ceased to demand of us allegiance, it is true; but she interposed others equally humiliating to our national pride, and contrary to every principle of international law. Increasing in impudence as we forbore to chastise her arrogance, she continued her incroachments and rose in her demands and pretensions until the spirit of the country was aroused. A second war ensued. In this, too, our countrymen displayed deeds of daring equal to those of the Revolutionary period. Having accomplished the objects for which the war was commenced, and again humbled the pride of England, an honorable peace was concluded.

Our country enjoyed a long period of tranquility, accompanied by physical and moral progress unparaleled in the history of the world. A few Indian wars alone broke the monotony of our history until 1846, when we suddenly found ourselves involved in a war with a neighboring Republic. This contest, too, was fruitful of "daring deeds;" but is so recent that it is unnecessary to more than allude to it here.

Upon concluding this history of our country, we can scarcely refrain from asking who of our ancestors anticipated results from their toils, so stupendous as those which we behold? Who of them predicted, while they were laying up the forest, for a shelter, that they were commencing an empire, which within four centuries, would extend thousands of miles, and embrace within its bosom twenty millions of the human race? Who then tho't of cities with their busy population, thousands of miles from the waters of the Atlantic? or of fleets, on inland seas, proceeding to and returning from distant voyages? or of navies pouring forth their thunder and flames? Such results entered not into sober calculation, and were beyond even the dreams of fancy. Yet three centuries have brought them to pass. The branch which our fathers planted, under the fostering care of Heaven, rose, extended, invigorated. It acquired stability by oppression, and gathered importance from the efforts that were made to crush it.

In the progress of our history, we have seen the American people, while sustaining only the character of colonists, and struggling with the discouragement and difficulties of new settlements, maintaining at their own expense, and bringing to prosperous conclusion, wars, which a selfish and jealous mother country, by her pride and impudence, had occasioned.—We have seen these colonies, amidst all the oppressions which they experienced, through exactions, calumnies, loss of charter, and one abridgment of liberty after another, still maintaining their loyalty—still indulging the feelings and adopting the language of affection, until justice and patriotism and religion, bid them rise to assert those rights which the God of nature designed for all his rational offsprings.

Through a long and trying war, in which inexperience had to contend with discipline, and poverty with wealth, we see them pledging their fortunes, liberties, and lives to one another, and to the astonishment of the world, accomplishing their emancipation. And when emancipated, and transformed into an independent nation, we see them calmly betaking themselves to the organization of a government, under a constitution as wise as it was singular, and whose excellency and competency the experience of more than seventy years has confirmed.

Simultaneously with these events, what extensive conquests have been made on the wilderness? Deserts have put on beauty and fruitfulness, and a way has been constantly extending towards the waters of the Pacific, for the advance of civilization and religion.

Incidents in the history of our country are valuable for study. The record of what our ancestors have achieved and suffered to purchase our liberties, will impress upon the minds of the young an idea of their priceless value. Let the children of America be early imbued with a love for their country. Teach them the principles of true patriotism, by the way and by the fireside—going out and coming in; rehearse to them while in their infant years, the story of the Pilgrims. Tell them the story of the Revolution, and their love of country shall "grow with their growth and strengthen with their strength."

When Mr. Rishel had concluded, the following toasts were read by J. B. Shaw:

By John Young—

Our Captain gives, the President,
His bosom burns with valor's flame;
And round the decks the toast is sent,
Of Lawrence and Decatur's fame.
Our glorious land of liberty,
This toast in turn is given;
And ever as it came,
I give, the land we live in.

By W. D. Shirey—The day we celebrate.—In the memory of that day which gave birth to liberty, may the glorious results which have sprung from its acts never cease in their onward course till all the nations of the earth are free.

By C. Lanich—Education is the foundation on which our republican institutions are perpetuated, and on the intelligence of our youths depends the future liberty, happiness, grandeur and glory, of our beloved country. Then I would say to the Sunday School Scholars of Mt. Joy, go on in the path that leads to honor and renown; become learned and you will be great; love God and serve him, and you will be happy.

By Nathoniel Rishel—May the course of the Mt. Joy Sunday School ever be onward and upward, and peace, good will and prosperity crown every effort.

By Oliver Conklin—

Oh, may every mother have seven sons
And twice as many daughters;
May every ship carry seven guns,
To sweep the Atlantic waters.

By John Shaw, Jr.—

All hail the day of freedom's birth,
Its fame be echoed round the earth,
Till every nation 'neath the sun,
Has learned the name of Washington.

By Oston Shirey—May our soil be as poisonous to Kings and Lords as that of Greenland is to snakes and toads.

By Matthew Ogden, Jr.—

Shall the name of a Washington ever be heard
By a freeman, and thrill not his breast;
Is there one out of bondage that hails not the sword,
As the Bethlehem Star of the West.

By E. K. Shirey—Preserve the Constitution as it is, untouched and unimpaired. Carry it out in the spirit in which it was framed; transmit it to our children as we received it; it is the richest legacy we can bequeath them. God grant that it may be transmitted from generation to generation until time itself shall be no more.

John Owens—The day we celebrate: A day dear to every American; a day to be held in everlasting remembrance; a day whose light circulates joy through the hearts of all republicans, and horror thro' the hearts of all tyrants.

By Joseph Lanich—Odd-Fellowship: This is hoping that Odd-fellowship may prosper, and become renowned for its Charity and Benevolence; and thereby gain for itself a great name.

By R. H. Shaw—The fair ones of Mt. Joy demand the good cause of Temperance.

By D. W. Ogden—Blessed are they who see the day of glory: but more blessed are they who contribute to its approach.

By Peter Owens—The name of Washington adds new lustre to humanity, and resounds to the remotest regions of the earth.

By Wm. Ogden—Temperance: May its course be onward until it shall not have a rival in all our happy land.

By J. W. Wallace—

Oppressions power our sires repelled,
And from our land the foe expelled.
They rallied forth to victory,
And shouted God and Liberty.

By Wm. Wallace—Union, Communion, and Prosperity to the Mount Joy Sunday School.

By J. B. Shaw—To the fair sex: We admire them for their beauty, respect them for their intelligence and virtue, and love them because we cannot help it.

By Joseph L. Thompson—

The ships of our navy
And the ladies of our land:
May the former be well rigged,
And the latter well manned.

The exercises were then closed.

P. A. YOUNG, Sec'y.

Temporary Loan.

We have noticed statements in some of the papers, that Gov. Bigler had negotiated a temporary loan of seven hundred thousand dollars, to carry on the state improvements. This is not entirely correct.

The facts of the case, as we understand them, are that by the terms of the last appropriation bill, the Governor is authorized to anticipate, by temporary loans, the surplus receipts for the years 1853—'54, after providing for all ordinary expenses, including the interest on the public debt. The sum so raised is to be appropriated towards the completion of the N. Branch Canal, relaying the north track of the Columbia railroad, and the avoidance of the plains on the Allegheny mountains. Under this authority temporary loans to the amount of $475,000 have been negotiated, and not $700,000. The reasons for this measure are very obvious. The Governor had taken the position that the State debt should not be permanently increased for any purpose whatever. That all the improvements now in progress must be completed from the current means of the treasury, and that too without disturbing the Sinking Fund. The contractors are now at work, and unless the revenues were anticipated by temporary loans, no means of payment could be furnished, as the balance in the treasury could not be ascertained until the close of the year, and consequently the work on these improvements would be suspended, and their completion, so important in every way, postponed.—Under the present arrangement we are assured the North Branch Canal will be completed by the first of October, and the north track of the Columbia railroad, under the direction of the faithful and indefatigable Joseph Baker, Esq., will be finished about the same time, and be one of the best roads in the country. Every right minded citizen of the State, not disposed to find fault with everything, must see the wisdom and the advantage of this policy.

No man in the state understands her financial affairs better than Gov. Bigler, and no man has or will labor with more untiring zeal to promote he true interests. Pennsylvanian.

Terrible Steamboat Explosion and Loss of Life.

NEW YORK, July 1.—This morning, as the splendid steamer New World was about leaving her wharf for Albany, she collapsed her flue, and for some time the greatest consternation existed among the large number of passengers on board.—The steam burst forth in an immense stream, doing considerable damage to the boat, and scalding the engineer and assistant engineer; and one of the hands has since died. The others are dangerous. All the passengers escaped without injury.

☞ The Strawberry, which is now at the height of its perfection in our markets if applied with a brush to the teeth, will remove the tartar more effectually than any dentrifrice even invented. Give it a trial. One or two strawberries, eaten in the morning will cleanse the mouth delightfully, and with their application to the teeth, as regommended, gives a delicious fragrance to the breath.

☞ A fire broke out in Pittsburgh on the 27th ult, destroying property to the amount of $75,000 or $100,000, which was mostly covered by insurance.

During the fire a man by the name of G. Gracy, cut Thos. M'Closky with a knife. The unfortunate man lived but a few hours after receiving the stab. The murderer eluded the officers and made his escape.

REMEDY FOR DYSENTARY.—The season having arrived when bilions and dysenteric diseases prevail, the following recipe from Babcock's Philosophical Recreations, may prove serviceable to the public:—In addition to the value of pulverized charcoal in bilious disorders, two ounces of it boiled in a pint of fresh milk, may be taken in doses of a wine glass full by adults, every two hours, in the most obdurate dysentary, until relief is imparted, which has not failed to be the effect in almost every instance. It is harmless and may be tried with safety.

☞ The Steamer Georgia, from California, which arrived in New York on the 29th ult., had on board over two millions of gold.
