

THE HUMORS OF POLITICS.

At the late election, John, or as he was more generally styled, Jack Mills, a bachelor in Galveston, was a candidate for the Legislature. His address to the electors is as follows:

"To the Voters of Galveston County,

I have been strongly urged by my numerous friends, (who are all A No. 1), to become a candidate to represent you in the next Legislature. Like a true patriot, I have consented to sacrifice my private interests to the public good. Without vanity, I may say, and all who know me will admit, that, if elected, I will originate and execute many acts in Austin, that no one of the candidates before you will attempt. I pledge myself that I will keep a watchful eye over the morals of legislators. No one who knows me will doubt to exercise the power, that members will be compelled to observe the rules of propriety, instead of indulging, as I fear is too often the case, in nocturnal revels, at improper places and unseemly hours. Reform is necessary. I am the man to effect it—in fact, the only man that can, and will do it.

I am progressive. I may say, a fast one.

I go for the greatest good to the greatest number."

I am in favor of giving homes to the homeless, and houses to the houseless.

I believe that earth, air and water, is a gift of the good God to all. That all are entitled to as much as is necessary for their use. More than this is a monopoly, and I oppose all monopolies.

I am in favor of banks, if a plan can be invented to establish one to loan money to the poor, industrious, honest men, without security.

I am a "Young American." I adopt their boundary—East by the rising, and West by the setting sun; North by the Arctic expedition, and South—as far as we please. This is a great country, and less than this would not suit our purposes. I abhor old fogy, whether as politicians, warriors, husbands or lovers. I wish this distinctly understood.

I disown the creed of all things unto all men, but adopt it decidedly as regards the ladies.

I am for women's rights on the largest scale. If we did not yield them equality, I fear they will refuse to multiply and replenish the earth, as they have threatened to do. And every unprejudiced mind must admit that they become our wives not to please themselves, but us. I am too modest to enumerate all my good qualities and qualifications for office. I leave all self-praise to my competitors. I think however, without vanity, I may say that, if elected, I will be more distinguished than any representative you have had. You will be proud of me. My name will be familiar to all, and daily seen in the public prints.

I am an old Texan, one of the founders of Galveston. I have shed much blood for the good of the people. I ask, in return, your votes. I will see most of you before the election, and I will address you before the public.

I am opposed to the practice of treating, but when invited, will be happy to take a glass with any one. In this particular, I make no distinction in politics.

JOHN MILLS.

P. S.—I forgot to say that I am in favor of the next war.

"THE ADVANTAGE.—Two gentlemen Mr. D. and Mr. L. stood candidates for a seat in the Legislature of New York.—They were violently opposed to each other.

By some artifice Mr. D. gained the election. When he was returning home much elated with success, he met a gentleman and acquaintance of his—

"Well," says D., "I have got the election—L. was no match for me—I'll tell you how I flung him—if there happened any Dutch voters, I could talk Dutch with them, and there I had the advantage of him. If there were any Frenchmen, I could talk French with them, and there I had the advantage of him. But as to L. he was a clever, honest, sensible little fellow."

"Yes sir," replied the gentleman, "and there he had the advantage of you."

We all had to do it.—A half score of young urchins were gathered around a companion who palid face indicated that he was very sick, the result of some juvenile indiscretion. The little fellows were busy offering their sympathy in various phrases. The truth is he had taken a "chew" of tobacco for the first time in his life, and having swallowed a portion of the weed, grew deathly sick.—One little fellow, who seemed to understand more fully his companion's situation than any of the others, gently placed upon the sick boy's shoulder his hand, and said in a voice of deep condolence. "Never mind Jiminy, we had all to go through this very severe trial!"

"Get out of the way old Dan Tucker. You're too late to come to supper."

The popular song is changed, in the course of advancing refinement, so that it is to be read—"Will the venerable Daniel Tucker, Esq., have the goodness to withdraw for a few minutes, as in consequence of his late arrival it will be wholly impossible for him to take his evening refreshment at the first table?"

"When a man refuses to pay a debt among the Mormons, they send three officers called whistlers, who take their stations in front of the debtor's house, each with a jack-knife and a bundle of sticks, and whistles away, day after day, till the債務者 knocks under. It is said that the remedy seldom fails."

"Father, ain't you opposed to monopoly?" shouted a little fellow as his father took up the brandy bottle. "Yes, my son." Then give me a drink."

"Sam Slick says he would rather break a wok of steers any day, than to break a wok of quarrel between two who break when they have got their dander up."
