At half past one o'clock a carriage drove up to the St. John's Hotel, the residence of Colonel Nationer, containing the "grey-eyed man of destiny," and they quietly departed for the steamship pier. Their departure was known only to a few friends. Mr. Macknown only to a few friends. The donkey took fright at something or nothing, and the bag fell to are respectfully invited to call at the Infirmary the ground. Here was a dilemma The where many interesting cases can be witnessed, donkey was still there, and the boy was sad where our Improved Apparatus for the inhathere, and the coals were there; but then the weight of the latter was beyond the strength of the lad. He could not lift the bag to replace it in its original position.— There was no help for it but to wait until some other traveller should arrive and assist him out of his difficulties. This might not happen for hours in that desolate part of the country, a by-lane little travelled : but it was the only chance.

At last, however, a horseman loomed in church dignitary. Ilis only feeling, therefore, was one of joy, unmixed with a single particle of awe, a six foot of a man coming, to be seriously diseased. who, to his unsophisticated eyes, looked, from a full measure of brawn and sinew, to tem, manifesting itself—as all who have used the lift up his bag of coals and replace it on his donkey's back.

Here was a salutation even from a fellow creature in distress. The Archdeacon had been accustomed for years to give the longest of charges to his brother elergy. But he never had so short and abrupt a charge addressed to himself before. How would he take it? What would he do? Would he play the priest or the Levite and pass on? No! by the milk of human kindness the lingering in his breast, the spirit of the good Samaritan rises within him, and he, Dr. Bigwigs, the venerable Archdeacon of Grandairs, dismounts from his sleek and well-groomed cob to render the required help and aid. Then to do it they went hammer and tongs, the boy and the Archdeacon, and after much tuging and pulling and tumbling it about, at length, both of them fairly out of breath, they succeed in replacing the sack on the donkey's back. If the Archdeacon had been astonished by his juvenile friend's application to him in GRADUATED MEASURES, NURSING its original form for help, he was doomed to be more so by the outpouring of his grat- Glass Ware for Chemists, Druggists, Perfemers, itude when the work was done.

"Well," exclaimed the young hopeful, in the warmth of his heart, "for such a big chap, as thee art, thee's the awkwardest at a bag o' coals I ever seed in my life." And so they parted. And so the Archdeacon told the tale himself, adding, with a laugh, "My white tie was soiled, and my lavender-colored kid gloves were dyed black; but then I made acquaintance with another feature of human nature and what is somthing, got a good appetite for assaulting a good dinner, and, what is most of all had the shine taken out of my conceit, by learning that I was the awkwardest chap at a bag of coals that was ever seen. Well' well, Poeta nascitur, non fit, and so of the coal-heavers. But I did my best as an amateur and volunteer, although I am the awkwardest of all awkward chaps at such work. The boy's criticism was as good as a sermon or as one of my own charges to me." And so ends our story of an awkward archdeacon and it is call and examine for yourselves.
