THE WIDOW.

Lo! here she comes - the widow comes! Young maidens stand aside, When homage can you hope to gain? out heapteons mall of sweet sixteen,

Hide your blue eres-they have no poner Beside fresh weeds-an apple dower.

And you with sparklingeyes of jet Matured in charms and gaces, yet, Sylph-like and winning, hoble, true, The widow even will rival you.

Brunettes and blonds, he short, the tall Yo that have hearts, or none at all, Yield, yield the palm nor dare compete With her who ne'er has known deleat,

A widow's charms-oh! who can trace Those magnets formed of love and grad Which skeptic feels, nor knows the dart That pierces even his guarded heart?

Young men and old, the gay the grave Alike her smiles, her favors crave, Both saints and sinners she beguiles, And none escape her magic smiles. Then girls beware while yet you may, Nor trust your lovers in the way Of widows, less you feel the smart That's rending now my aching heart.
