

CLEARFIELD, Oct. 31, 1860.

We ask attention to the letter from Wheeling. It is from a gentleman well known to the readers of this paper.

LAST APPEAL.

Whist we candidly confess to but little hope of preventing the election of Lincoln, we would yet, with all the energy that language can convey, exhort every MAN WHO DESIRES THE PERPETUATION OF OUR NATIONAL UNION, to go to the polls on NEXT TUESDAY, and cast his vote for the READING ELECTORAL TICKET.

We say we have but little hope of a favorable result, yet we hope that EVERY NATIONAL MAN will record his vote as a recorded PROTEST against the candidates of the sectional Black Republicans. It is melancholy to think that a majority, or that even a respectable portion of the people of Pennsylvania will cast their votes in such a way as will almost certainly destroy the Confederacy.

We know that it is the habit of the Abolitionists to say that this cry about the Union being in danger, is stale, and is only used to frighten the weak, &c. But in their hearts they know that it is true, that our country is just now in the most imminent peril, and that the grand aim of their labors, the DISSOLUTION OF THE UNION is about to be consummated by the election of Lincoln.

PERHAPS THE LAST OPPORTUNITY.

It may be, Democrats of Clearfield county, that you will never have another opportunity to cast a vote for a President of the United States. The signs of the times point in this direction with a fearful significance.

The Popular Vote in 1856.

As much misapprehension exists, even in ordinary well informed quarters, as to the result of the popular vote for President in 1856, and some Republicans even cherish the belief that had the election depended on the people, Fremont would have been President.

Table showing New England States, Middle States, Southern States, and Western States, with columns for Buchanan, Fillmore, Fremont, and Fremont's majority.

It will thus be seen that Fremont did not receive one-third of the popular vote of the country, that he received a majority in but one, and that the smallest section of the Union, and that the majority against him was largely in excess of the votes received.

with nothing of character, service, adventure or otherwise, to recommend him to either the respect or enthusiasm of the masses—that he can poll a larger vote, or come nearer being elected, than did Fremont, may be calculated upon by some Republican enthusiasts, but certainly such a result must, and does appear highly improbable to all thinking men, who have the future welfare, and the continuing happy and prosperous condition of their country's good at heart.

It only needs a calm and unbiased survey of the present unsettled condition of the country, to find that the election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency, will result in no good to the country; hence every patriot should prevent his election to the office to which he aspires.

Pennsylvania Election for 1860—Official.

The following is the official vote for Governor by counties:

Table with columns for County, Foster, and Curtin, listing counties from Adams to York and their respective votes.

Total, 230,257 262,349; Curtin's majority, 32,092; Total vote of the State for Governor, 492,606.

The republicans have commenced squabbling in Pennsylvania to see who shall be Senator in place of Mr. Bigler.

Thanksgiving Day.

Pennsylvania, as usual in the name and by the authority of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, William F. Packe, Governor of the said Commonwealth:

A PROCLAMATION.

FELLOW CITIZENS: The revolutions of a year have again brought us to our annual festival of Thanksgiving to Almighty God. In no preceding year have we had more abundant cause for gratitude and praise. The revolving seasons have brought with them health and plenty.

mend to all our people, that setting aside, on that day, all worldly pursuits, they assemble in their respective places of worship, and unite in offering Thanks to God for his manifold goodness, and imploring His forgiveness, and the continuation of His mercies.

The Feeling in the South.

Correspondence of the Republican.

WHEELING, Va., Oct. 24, 1860. Business requiring a journey through a portion of Kentucky and Virginia, I embrace the occasion of a few moments' leisure to give you a faint idea of what I saw and heard on that occasion.

Until now, I never lost hope of the preservation of the Union. We are taught to believe that God in His wise providence, has frequently interposed in behalf of our beloved country, and brought us safely through every ordeal.

But this, as bad as it is, is not the worst feature in the dark future. Many Southern people—indeed, I might say all of them—believe that all the friends of Lincoln are rank Abolitionists.

That this state of feeling exists among the slaves is manifested in various ways. You see it in the increased watchfulness on the part of the owners; in the numerous attempts at insurrection, conflagration, poisoning, &c.

I believe the Southern people love the Union with greater ardor, and truer affection, than the people of the North. The memories of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, &c.

In this part of Virginia the Abolitionists are quite numerous, and in this city, one of the largest and most imposing "Lincoln and Hamlin" banners have been anywhere, stretched across one of the principal streets, and a respectable vote for the Republican candidates will be polled in this city and one or two of the adjoining counties. This vote will be polled without the slightest hindrance or molestation—although the most intense excitement and bitterness of feeling exists.

ADDRESS.

FELLOW CITIZENS: With a desire to promote your best interests, and give peace to our country—so long and so violently convulsed by slavery agitation—we again address you.

It would be madness to disguise the fact, painfully apparent, that there is now a poisoned public sentiment prevailing among the people, well calculated to awaken the most serious apprehensions.

In view of these events, all pointing to the triumph of a geographical party, startlingly described by the "Father of his Country," in his "Farewell Address to the people," it becomes the intelligent voter to reflect before depositing his ballot.

The Opposition, flushed with victory, and blind to the just retribution that must follow their temporary triumph, are making great exertions to carry the State for Lincoln and Abolitionism.

Will you, then, fellow-Democrats, lay down your arms because of the "whirlwind" that has passed? Will you remain indifferent while danger and disgrace threaten our common country? Will you, by inactivity, strengthen this sentiment, that demands rebuke?

Proud of your fidelity heretofore, we expect once more to see it manfully displayed. Considerations of great weight require your services. Give another day to the country, and as conservatives discharge your duty, so that when bitter-ness, contention, and insurrection shall distract our land;

The idea of installing the Pope in Jerusalem has been broached by the French press. They say that it is no further from Jerusalem to Jaffa than from Rome to its seaport, Civita Vecchia; a railroad would place Jerusalem within one hour of the Mediterranean, and it would be very nearly as convenient for the Catholic world as Rome is now.

Address of the Democratic State Executive Committee.

To the Democracy of Pennsylvania:

The Democratic State Committee deems it a duty, once more to address you, before the final vote for President of the United States. It is enabled to do so now, with a consciousness that every sacrifice of private feeling having been made, the Democratic party is once more united in the support of the regularly nominated Electoral Ticket, which, in its aggregate, represents the public sentiment of Pennsylvania, adverse to sectionalism, and faithful to the Union and the Constitution.

The object of the State Committee now is, to invoke for that ticket a zealous and active support. Such a support, given in every county of the State, may reverse the defeat at the State election, and even if it does not, will save the Democratic party from that disintegration, which an apparent abandonment of its flag would seem to threaten.

A thorough organization and full vote of the Democracy at the Presidential election, is important for other reasons. Intoxicated by one victory, won mainly through the unhappy differences of the Democracy, sure, without effort, of another in November, the leaders of the Republican party are meditating an extensive export of Pennsylvania voters into the neighboring States, especially in New Jersey and Delaware.

But there is a higher and stronger motive to action. Every Democratic vote cast in November—every vote, indeed, against the Republican ticket—is a vote for the Constitution, the Union, and for the rights and property and safety of our Southern brethren, and swells the great conservative body, which, whether it be at the time a majority or minority, stands as the only barrier to sectionalism and fanaticism.

The Opposition, flushed with victory, and blind to the just retribution that must follow their temporary triumph, are making great exertions to carry the State for Lincoln and Abolitionism. Satisfied that the "irrepressible conflict" is at hand, and confidently counting on our lethargy, they are actively engaged in canvassing every election district.
