I gare into such empty room, And as I gave a grawing pain Is at my heart, as thought of those Who ne'er will pass the door again.

And, strolling down the orchard slope, (So wide a likenous grief will crave.) Each dead loaf seems a withered hope, Each mosey hillor's rocus a grave.

They will not hear me if I call; They will not see those tears that start; "Tis autumn-autumn with it all-And worse than autumn is my heart.

O leaves so dry, so dead, and sore ! I can recall some happier hours, When summer's glory linger'd there, And summer's beauty touch'd the flowers.

Adown the slope a slender shape Danced lightly, with her flowing gurls, And manhood's deeper tones were blent With the gay laugh of happy girls.

O stolen meetings at the gate! O lingerings at the open door! O moonlight rambles long and late ! My heart can scarce believe them o'er.

And yet the silence strange and still, The air of sadness and decay, The moss that grows upon the sill-Yes, love and hope have gone away! So like, so like a worn-out heart!

Which the last tenant finds too cold, And loaves forever more, as they Have left this homestead, red and old. Poer empty house! poor lonely heart!

Twere well if bravely, side by side, You waited, till the hand of Time Each ruin's mossy wreath supplied.

I lean upon the gate and sigh; Some bitter tears will force their way ; And then I bid the place good-by For many a long and weary day,

I cross the little ice-bound brook, (In summer 'tisa noisy stream,) Turn round, to take a last fond look, And all has fuded like a dream.
