Religious Miscellany.

Live for Something.

Live for something—be not idle—Look about thee for employ—Sit not down to useless dreaming—Labour is the sweetest joy—Folish hearts are ever weary—Selfish hearts are never gay—Life for thee hath many duties—Active, be thou, while you may.

How few our real wants! and how easy is it to satisfy them! Our imaginary ones are boundless and unsatisfiable.

There is scarcely any error on the subject of religion which may not be traced to ignorance or forgetfulness of the great truth that God's thoughts and ways are infinitely higher than those of man.

Home can never be transferred, never repeated in the experience of an individual. The place consecrated to parental love by the innocence and sports of childhood is the only home of the human heart.

How deeply unbelief must be in our hearts, when we are surprised to find our prayers answered! Instead of feeling sure that they will be so, if they are only offered up in faith, and are in accord with the will of God.

To judge of Christianity from the views of ordinary nominal Christians, is about as just as it would be to judge of tropic fruits and flowers from the produce which the same plants might bring forth in Iceland.

If you want to gain any man's good opinion, take particular care how you behave the first time you are in company with him. The light you appear in at first, to one who is neither inclinable to think well or ill of you, will strongly prejudice him either for or against you.

It is said "the devout astronomer is mad," that, with God before him in all the wisdom and glory of the heavens, he recognizes not his being and hand; so sad is the unbelief common mind, mad that, with God before his eyes, in the daily miracles of life, growth, thought, he never recognizes him.

Let us remember that whatever be the importance of theology in the history of the world and of the church, to us, individually, the vital thing is practical Christianity. To think right, and to do wrong, is so much the greater condemnation. Better to be a sectarian on the side of Christ than an infidel against Him.— [Rev. J. C. Zachos.]

Yours as Supports.—How often have I found a text of Scripture prove a word in season to my heart! How often have I dashed away a tear with this thought—"Endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." 2 Tim. ii, 3.
Every Zion bound pilgrim should have his wallet well stored with Scripture precepts and promises, for they will be most and drink to him on his way homeward.

Men cannot choose whether they will suffer in this life. Who is exempt?
They cannot choose whether adversity shall overtake them. No one is master of his own destiny. They have no security against the great sorrows of life, and no opinion whether to die or not. But they may choose whether they will meet these solemn liabilities and inevitable certainties of mortal existence with God, or without him.

Little Things Providential.—We are apt to forget our actual dependence on Providence, for the circumstances of every instant. The most trivial events may determine our state in the world.— Turning up one street instead of another, may bring us into company with a person whom we should not otherwise have met; and this may lead to a train of other events, which may determine the happiness or misery of our lives.

Restless spirit, seek to be quiet in Christ. Make yourself happy in him, learn, in whatsoever state you are, to be content. Find something useful to do, and if already furnished with labors, remember that our Father is glorified by a faithful performance of even the smallest duties of life. Remember that you are the object of the Creator's individual care.
That you are never forgotten by him, and that no suffering can touch you which he does not know, and which he will not help you to bear. Cultivate resignation—desireful resignation.

Do not attempt to bring your political opinions into the church at all.— Politicians are always glad to use the church to further their parties, and will gladly do it if Christians will allow them; but Christ has declared that his kingdom is not of this world. We do not say that Christians should not be politicians, and advocate earnestly and fearlessly in appropriate places and on proper occasions, those views of civil affairs and of State and National policy which they believe to be right. Far from it. They must be good citizens, and render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, as well as to God the things that are God's. They should carry their religion into their politics, but not their politics into their religion.

BRIDGING THE STREAM.—When engineers would bridge a stream, they often carry over at first but a single thread.— With that they next stretch a wire across.
Then strand is added to strand until a foundation is laid for planks; and now the bold engineer finds safe footing, and walks from side to side. So God takes from us some golden-threaded pleasure and stretches it hence into heaven. Then He takes a child, and then a friend.— Thus he bridges death, and teaches the thoughts of the most timid to find their way hither and thither between the two spheres.

FROM THE BURNSIDE EXPEDITION.

"THE CONTRACTORS HAVE RUINED ME!" [Correspondence of the New York Times.]

The "white" purchased for the contractors never could have stood storm at sea. Old freight boats from English keeps and Albany were fitted up as gun-boats, painted black to look formidable; and two of them, the Lancaster and Pioneer, carried five hundred troops each. When in the mouth of the sea they rolled fears-fully, and a Captain in the navy, who was on board the latter, stated that in case of a storm nothing could prevent her from bumping and going down. The contractor who furnished the water casks for the expedition has committed an outrage upon our soldiers which should only entitle him to John Brown's fate. The casks were put water in were old whiskey, kerosene oil and champagne barrels furnished by the Union city of Baltimore. The soldiers endured from this source were terrible.
Another contract, let would have been a luxury to the soldiers—it was $5 a ton. Water was short of—Coal was short of—it was only $4 50 a ton.— Stones worth 25 cents a ton. All of these most excellent ballast. Yet would it be believed that we took on board pig iron at $20 a ton as ballast, knowing what we started we should have to cast it overboard. Yet such is the fact. The gunboat Lancaster arrived at Hatteras Inlet, short of coal and water, and yet she fired over 75 tons of iron—$1,750 worth. The pioneer threw over $1,500 worth. In all, $3,250 worth of iron was cast overboard, yet we were short of water.

The pilot, we were told, were all Union Hatteras Inlet was Union, and New York subscribed $8,000 for the inhabitants, because they were all Union. Yet one of the pilots hired by us went over to the enemy and informed them of everything; and as for the inhabitants of Hatteras Inlet, they are too ignorant to know the difference between Union and Secession. It is all nonsense; experience teaches us that if there are no Union men there; that the 3,000 rifles asked for, if they had been granted, would now be on Roanoke Island, and that the $8,000 sent to North Carolina, for the benefit of Union men, was all lost to us.
The South are in earnest, and we are at play. We had to pay $800 in secret service money to those self-same Union men to know whether Roanoke Island was occupied or not. Briefly reiterating the facts contained in my first dispatch, and calling attention to the casualties of these steamboat contractors, and other contractors, and asking the public to pause in the contemplation of a set of contractors who have altered the lives and the health of 18,000 men to be perilled by their life-boats and their water-casks, I will conclude by stating the position of affairs. The naval publics have crossed the "swash." One half of Gen. Burnside's vessels have done honor. Seven thousand troops are safely over. These vessels which cannot cross will be relieved of their crews, and will go on other vessels. Vessels may be injured. Water was scarce for a time.
The rations were rather slight. But the whole army of 18,000 men have confidence in their general. He is ever ready to relieve the wants of a shipwrecked crew, or the privations of a soldier. In the storm, in his top-boats, his old gray flannel shirt and cap; but the American soldiers loved by all. They have faith in his bravery—they have confidence in his judgment and their experience teaches them that Gen. Burnside will never bring back the star on his shoulder dimmed by defeat, but rather that it will shine resplendent in victory.

FIRST AVENUE HOTEL, N. Y., Jan. 26.

"For goodness' sake let us lose sight of the negro and strive to annihilate the condition of the white man. The St. Louis abolition says, as it touches upon the abolition fallacies, and forcibly asks—"Where are those general opinions of the slaves, so confidently propounded in certain quarters, as the inevitable result of a civil war? Where are those servile butcheries that heated imaginations engaged up as the probable result of our domestic conflict? Where is that universal unrest of the blacks, which was expected to deplete the Southern States of the 'brawny sons of toil,' and lead them to a safe refuge in the North? There have been no insurrections, and there are likely to be none. May not, therefore, the Abolitionists, who have been mistaken in this idea, be equally mistaken in many other notions that they are constantly and permanently forcing upon the public?— The holiday season is over, when custom allows the slaves of the South almost unrestricted liberty, and yet we have heard no of gigantic revolts, such as have been promised as following the occupation of the southern country by the Federal troops in Dixie."

They made the attack, but a few rounds from Lieut. Muhlenberg's pop-gun soon made them scaddle.

The next day Gen. Williams, with his Brigade, arrived, but I have not time to record anything concerning it.

I hope you will not forget that a newspaper from home is always welcome to a soldier.

Yours,
S. F.

A MURDERER SURRENDERS HIMSELF.—In Danbury, Conn., last September, a man named Moran was murdered mysteriously, and the offer of a liberal reward failed to detect the murderers. Lately the reward increased to $200, and Patrick Ryan, (one of the suspected parties,) writes a letter to one of the surviving brothers of the murdered man, saying, "If you don't want to lose your money, you draw it back," and offering to give himself up and stand trial.
On the day named, the 6th inst., he surrendered himself to the officers.

If a man is odious in society, he might as well be in prison; the worst prisons are not flog.

When a pickpocket pulls at your watch, tell him plainly that you have no time to spare.
