The Clearfield Republican.

WEDNESDAY APRIL 2nd, 1862

Try good Dandelion Coffee at Lumsdens, he keeps the best article now offered to the public. Ask for Moschein's.

Quite a respectable thunder storm visited our town last Sunday, the rain and hail descending in good earnest. A house, we are informed, was struck by lightning about the above time, in Philipsburg.

We regret to learn that the elegant new residence of J. H. Gearhart, of Bradford township, was entirely consumed by fire on last Friday. We learned none of the particulars.

MOVING DAY.—Yesterday—being the 1st of April—several of our citizens changed their domicils, resulting in some little excitement, and causing a few clever fights, in which, so far as we know, none were killed, but a few were wounded and some prisoners taken.

FOUND DEAD IN THE ROAD.—We learn that an Inquest was held by Justice Wm. McKee of Knox township, on Sunday the 23d ult., on the dead body of a woman found on Potts Run road about one mile from Clearfield Creek. When the neighbors collected, the body was identified as that of Mrs. Haley, aged about 52 years, who had been on a visit to the residence of John M. Chase, whence she left, in apparent good health, some four or five hours previous to being found. No marks of violence were visible. The verdict of the Jury was, that the deceased came to her death by some disease unknown to them.

TAX UPON OIL.—We see it stated that upon the urgent solicitation of Messrs. Patton and McKnight of Pennsylvania, and Fenton, of N. Y., the Committee of Ways and Means in Congress have consented to strike off the proposed duty of five per cent on crude rock oil, or petroleum, leaving the tax eight cents per gallon on the refined article. This, of itself, will add about one-fourth to its present cost.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—Our lumbermen have nearly all returned—having readily disposed of their stock at fair prices. But few rafts were sent off, in consequence of the low stage of the water. The rafts yet on hand are generally ready to "tie loose" as soon as there is sufficient water. It was supposed that hands would be scarce, and wages correspondingly high. The reverse has proved to be the case—caused, most probably, by the smallness of the quantity of lumber compared with former years.

GOV. SPRAGUE OF R. I.—We see an article conspicuously paraded in the Abolition papers—and among them the Journal of this place—purporting to be extracts from a letter, or address, of Gov. Sprague of Rhode Island, among which the following sentence is found:

"To propose, therefore, that the Union shall survive and its glory and power be triumphantly restored and perpetuated, is virtually to doom slavery to speedy extinction. The preservation of the Union and the destruction of slavery are inseparable; are identical now; and he who votes for the one necessarily votes for the other."

We have the authority of the Harrisburg Patriot & Union for saying that Gov. Sprague never uttered any such sentiment,—that this is an Abolition lie; that Gov. S. never uttered any sentiment inconsistent with the restoration of the Union as it was, and the Constitutional rights of all the States and the people thereof fully restored.

THE LATE COLONEL MURRAY.

Quite a number of our exchanges contain eloquent and no less beautiful eulogies upon the late Col. Murray—for he was widely known, and wherever known, universally respected as a man, an officer and a citizen. He was all that a TRUE MAN ought to be.

Among the many tributes to his memory, we see no one that is more just—because unpretentious—than the following from the Harrisburg Patriot & Union of the 26th ult.

We regret to state that dispatches received yesterday from Winchester by Gov. Curtin, and also by Lieut. Col. T. C. MacDowell, announce the death of Col. WILLIAM GRAY MURRAY, of the Eighty-fourth regiment, a native of this city, but for some years past a resident of Hollidaysburg. The dispatches state that, after fighting all day on Sunday, he fell in the evening at the head of his regiment, while cheering on his men, and but a few minutes before the victory was won.

Col. Murray was about thirty-eight years of age. When the war with Mexico broke out he went as a private in the Cameron Guards, but soon after his arrival in Mexico he was promoted to a lieutenancy in the Eleventh infantry, in which he served until the close of the war.

In 1848 he settled in Hollidaysburg, where he entered into the Mercantile business. In 1852 he took an active part in politics, and immediately after the inauguration of President Pierce he was appointed Post Master—a position which he continued to hold during President Buchanan's Administration.

He was married to a daughter of John Dougherty, formerly a contractor on the public works, and for many years the proprietor of the United States Hotel, in Hollidaysburg. He was anxious to enter the regular army when the war first broke out, and a Captain's commission was offered him, but his wife then being in the last stage of consumption, he refused to accept it.

Shortly after the death of his wife, at the earnest request of a number of persons, he commenced raising a regiment, in which undertaking he was entirely successful, and he marched from this city with as fine a body of men as ever left it. These men were mostly from Blair and Clearfield counties, and we think that the official dispatches will prove that they fought as bravely as any body of men that ever faced the foe. This we infer from the dispatch which says that the Eighty-fourth was badly cut up.

The remains of Col. Murray will be brought to this city, where his mother and sisters reside, for interment. He leaves two children, who are in charge of their grandfather.

Lieut. Col. MacDowell, who has been at home for several weeks on furlough, suffering from inflamatory rheumatism, although not fully restored to health, will leave for Winchester to join the regiment, this morning.

It is likely that the Governor will have the wounded of the Eighty fourth, as well as the wounded of all the Pennsylvania regiments, immediately brought within the borders of the State.

Letter from the EightyFourth

CAMP KIMBALL, NEAR WINCHESTER, } Va., March 21, 1862. }

Dear Republican:—I told you in my last letter I would, in all probability, next write to you from Winchester. Well, we are not exactly in Winchester, but we are lying within a mile of it in the mud and mire—Gen. Banks and his head-box soldiers occupy the town. Now, you should see these soldiers of Gen. Banks. They parade the streets in white gloves, white shirts, and boots blacked to looking-glass perfection; upon my word it makes us laugh. By us I mean we of Gen. Shields's Division—the mud-trampers, baggage-carriers and field-sleepers. Gen. Banks has lain at Frederick for months, in winter quarters—nicely housed—tents in house-order—and any quantity of provisions.—On the other hand our Division has been moving about all the time—half of the time without tents—sleeping on the wet ground with one blanket around us; nothing to eat except hard johnnies; miles away from our baggage: no change of clothes for two or three weeks. Is it any wonder that we laugh at these polished, powdered jacks?

On last Tuesday morning, with three days' rations in our haversacks, and our blankets slung, we started on a march—we know not where, or for what purpose. The artillery was some little distance in advance, and the first intimation of the presence of an enemy we received, was the roar of thirty pieces of cannon—and immediately afterwards, the second report—the bursting of the shells. Immediately the whole column of our force—fifteen thousand infantry—burst into a loud cheer—so voluntary that the hills resounded with the echo. Eager indeed were the boys for a brush—for, although we had marched eighteen miles, and tired and lagged as they had appeared a moment before—every file was closed and covered. The word ran down the line that we were within two miles of Strasburg—the heretofore invincible fortified post of the rebel army. We were immediately ordered forward, but had not gone far when a cloud of smoke informed us that some bridge in our path had gone the way of all things. And so it proved—for the bridge over a creek called Cedar Creek had been burned by the enemy, who were making use of the delay by travelling on a double quick Dixieward. Not long were we forming a foot path over the fallen timbers—and after them we sped. About two miles beyond Strasburg we caught them, on a mountain, where they made a stand. Expecting us to follow the road, they took a position which commanded it entirely, and would have made sad havoc with our lines had we so confronted them;—but we filed up an opposite mountain, and before they knew where we were, our cannon belched out on them, when they fled over the mountain in confusion.

We followed them for several miles, but they fled so fast—and burned all the railroad bridges in their track, forming so many obstacles, that our troops, wearied and footsore, abandoned the pursuit, and encamped for the night. The next day we marched back to Winchester—making 21 miles, without halting. The whole movement seems to have been a reconoissance in force of the natural and artificial fortications of Strasburg, and the advantage, if any, to be derived from obtaining possesion of them. We left a small force of cavalry there. We have orders now to keep on hands six days supply of extra rations. Where we go next we know not—but that some decisive movement is in contemplation, no one doubts. Secretary Stanton said this campaign must be closed by the 1st of June—would that it might.

I see by the papers that part of that "able general's command (Banks) reached Manassas by way of Strasburg, the other day." That's the way it goes. Gen. Banks' original command has never left since its arrival there—Gen. Shields' division took possession of Strasburg—made the hard marches—laid out on the open field, and Gen. Banks pockets the credit. Is that altogether fair?

We are in the first brigade of Shields' division, commanded by Col. Nathan Kimball, of the 14th Indiana—an able commander, with the confidence, respect and love of his command. More anon.

Yours truly,
OLD TOWN.

HALE OR FORNEY.—No man knew John W. Forney better than did Mr. Buchanan; he knew and properly appreciated his high order of talents; but he also knew his failings—hence Mr. Buchanan refused to place Mr. Forney in any position where he could bring disgrace upon his Administration, and hence the ceaseless villification of the former by the latter. Perfectly characteristic of the Republican party, they immediately took Forney into full fellowship, and rewarded him for his treachery, first, by electing him Clerk of the House of Representatives, and then by making him Secretary of the United States Senate, which position he now holds. Senator Hale of New Hampshire, the other day, paid his respects to Mr. Forney after the following manner, from which it would appear that his new friends are likely to grow tired of him:

"I have endeavored to arrest some of our expenditures here in the Senate; and now I will mention another fact to this economical Senate, all of whom agree that economy is so necessary. We are reduced in numbers; we are about forty-nine instead of sixty-eight, as we used to be; and yet we are administering the Senate to-day vastly more expensively, with more officers and more salaries than we ever paid before. We require our Secretary, at the commencement of every year, to give us a list of his employees, their number and compensation. I have looked at the list for the last eight or ten years, and the list to-day is nearly double what it was ten years ago, and the salaries are much higher."

IT IS A BIRD.—We have frequently heard of the lies we referred to by our correspondent below although we have heretofore considered it so utterly contemptible as to be beneath notice, yet we rather thank our worthy friend for thus giving us the opportunity to characterize the story as it deserves to be, a lie—and known to be such by the miserable cuss that originated it—who is no less contemptible than the lie itself.

March 24, 1862.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I neglected to mention a report that is in circulation against you. It is this—That you were offered Fifty Dollars to publish the Hon. Jos. Holt's address to the citizens of Kentucky, and would not do it for fear its powerful reasoning might enlighten some of your benighted readers, and turn them from their present disunion course. Also the powerful Union sermon preached by Mr. Breckinridge Kentucky, Uncle to Hon. J. C. Breckinridge.

These things are brought up in argument to prove that your paper is not loyal, and must naturally follow that your readers are of spurious character, so far as Lincoln Constitutionality or jurisprudence is concerned. I do not credit one word of it, as I am perfectly convinced that the opposition could not exist twenty-four hours if they were compelled to stick to the truth. Perhaps you have heard of it before this, and do not consider it worth notice. Respectfully Yours,
