THE HAD A GRIEF TO HIDE.

BY ANNA B. CRISWELL.

The lamp upon the altar shed A pale and trembling light...

Her pale cheek—how wondrously she trembled that her love Was not with him who then was night...

And they were married. None but he Who knew her secret knew...

Religious Miscellany.

EXTRACTS FROM SERMONS BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

No other words come so near, in the popular comprehension, expressing the meaning of the term Kingdom of God...

Birds and children—God be blessed for them. How much I thank God that he did not let men come into the world as soldiers...

As time goes on, the blade growing less, the grass of which bearing to mow, the weeds of sin and numbers, and the soil, like the little, dying steadily away...

When there begins to be a desire for a revival of God's work, it is not wrong to desire that the congregation should be inflated, and that there should be a multiplication of meetings...

What must the joyous one do? He must take his wife and carry it according to the command of Christ; he must take his love of money, and all his natural affections...

At what time of the day was Adam created? A little before Eve.

A PERILOUS RIDE.

The noble beast that forms the subject of my story had been a day of the richest and most glossy color, with a lone spot of white hair on the forehead...

My curiosity at length became so great that I resolved to become acquainted with the reason why he was thus denuded with the respect and attachment of the household...

The doctor had been called to a Union business connected with his profession and had been absent three days. During that time one of these strange, warm, glowing rays had been sent down the mountain...

Now stop, Don, stop sure; old Oelsky bridge to my own hand and your knowledge, has lost many a peak...

They were now ascending the little eminence leading to the entrance, when the horse stopped. "To go, go," said the doctor, "you are nearly home!"

Do you hear me, sir? With a snort he fell on the neck, and a gathering up of the fore-end remounted the firm disengaged hand and the animal started...

Towards the end of the bridge the steps became steeper and once stumbled in the mud feet. A quick grasp at the halter, and a cheery "Easy John—easy!"

"Come from? Why, from over the Mohawk! What is the matter? Has the freshet carried away any of your senses?"

"Doctor," said the old gray-headed hand, "that bridge went down the Mohawk, this afternoon! Come with me and I will show you! If you crossed, God only knows how you did it."

A dinner went to the doctor's heart, lantern in hand, he followed the foot steps of the men to the margin of the swollen and turbid river. Where was the bridge?

"What is the matter?" inquired the General. "Why?" answered the old Captain. "They do say that old Barnside's down here, sword in hand, giving orders."

"What news?" inquired the General. "What?" answered the old Captain. "They do say that old Barnside's down here, sword in hand, giving orders."

A Little of Everything.

It is known that the President's General Fremont was recently sitting outside Fort Mason in a quiet way, he was interested in all that was going on.

"What news?" inquired the General. "What?" answered the old Captain. "They do say that old Barnside's down here, sword in hand, giving orders."
