Tremendous Victory.

GREATEST BATTLE ON RECORD!

15,000 Killed and Wounded, and 30,000 taken Prisoners!

WITH CAMP EQUIPAGE—AND 70,000 Contrabands freed from the BONDS OF SLAVERY!!

EVERY man that has read any thing of the past history of this WAR must finally come to the conclusion that the Confederate Government would be broken down. It was only a question of time. But now we have the above glorious and stirring news to cheer us up; and the only danger to our joy and glorification is the imminent danger of the Contrabands coming North to "eat out our substance," and to wear out our shoes! But of one thing the people of Clearfield county may be assured, and that is, that FRANK SHORT—(for short called Short)—is selling Boots & shoes as cheap as any other man in the county; and if you don't believe it, just give him a call on court-week, or any other time, and see for yourselves. He would just remind the public that his shop is now on Market street, in Shaw's Row—where you will find him just as short as he would like to be.

All kinds of work on hands and made to order on short notice, and as well made, and as good fits as can be "skered" up here or elsewhere.

Don't forget the shop—on Market street, in Shaw's Row, directly opposite Rev. H. B. Swoope's office.

Bulkley's Patent.

Lumber Dried by Superheated Steam.

THE undersigned respectfully informs the people of Clearfield and the adjoining counties that he has the agency of the above Patent, and will sell Individual, County and Township rights for its use. The Lumber dried by this process is stronger, fulfure better, a earlier on tools, and requires less time in drying than any other process known—using 1 inch lumber perfectly in 24 hours, and less than any other under the old system—using the same amount of fuel per day that a common kiln consumes. The certificates of a number of resident mechanics, well known in this county, is amply sufficient to convince the most skeptical of its practical utility. Persons desirous of purchasing rights will address

A CHARNEL HOUSE UN-URNED.

The Philadelphia North American gives the following:

One of the ghastliest sights that the eye could rest upon is to be seen in Carpenter street, between Eleventh and Twelfth. Many years ago, before the pauper dead were interred in the suburbs of the Twelfth-fourth ward, the Potter's field of Philadelphia was a lot of ground bounded by Eleventh and Twelfth, Carpenter and Washington streets. The place was filled with bodies in a short time by the last visitation of cholera upon the city. Up to that time only paupers were interred in this ground; but when the mortality by cholera became frightful, and grave diggers were engaged in interring only the wealthier of the people, there were scores of bodies laid in the public burial ground, whose relatives, probably, would have been horrified at the bare idea.

The end of the lot that was first filled is now being excavated for building purposes. Three dollars have been dug to the depth of seven feet, the whole course of which was cut through masses of coffins with their ghastly contents. The work should have been done in winter time, for a foul, sickening stench arises from the remains that infects the surrounding atmosphere. So repulsive is the digger's task that very high wages are exacted for performing it, and most of those who were applied to to perform it peremptorily declined. There is a tavern building upon the site of the field, whose owner was compelled to excavate his own cellar. Not a man could be found who would undertake the work.

Many of the bodies disinterred were in remarkable preservation. We saw a coffin opened there the other day, containing the body of a woman so natural in appearance as to cause an involuntary exclamation from those gathered around it. There were no other ornaments upon it than a single under garment, probably worn during the last sickness. There was no mold upon it; and on it in indelible ink was yet legible a female name.

Strange to say, a jar of the coffin by one of the rude laborers shook into impalpable powder—causing to disappear like a dissolving view, what five minutes before looked like a slumbering being. The coffin in which this was contained was of walnut, singularly smooth and clean. People who saw it pronounce that the dead body must have been a victim of cholera, hastily interred, for it was in the centre of many others, made rarely of unplanned pine, that the coffin was excavated.

Case after case of skulls, skeletons and bones have been hauled away, and cartloads of broken coffins have been appropriated for fuel by the poor people of the neighborhood. In the sides of the cellars may be seen the tiers of coffins, and deep as has been dug the bottom tier has not been reached. The lot, extending nearly from Eleventh to Twelfth street, is said to be equally full of human remains. Some boys whom we watched yesterday scraped the soil from a coffin-lid in the bottom of one of the cellars, and taking out the skull used it as a ball. The sight is not pleasant. The odor is fetid. People living opposite will be only too glad when the work of exhumation is completed.
