"Our only child, about three years of age, was attacked by pinsples on his forchead. They rapidly spread until they formed a loathsome and virulent sore, which covered his face, and actually blinded his eyes for some days. A shilful physician applied nitrate of silver and other remedes, without any apparent effect. For affect days we guarded his hands, lest with them he should tear open the festering and corrupt wound which covered his whole face. Having tried overy thing cles we had any hope from, we began giving your Salesapaethia, and applying the lodde of pench lotton, as you direct. The sore began to heal when we had finished the excoud.
