Death of Reed Bigler, Esq.

REED BIGLER, son of ex-Governor Bigler, of this place, died at Lock Haven, on the 2d instant, at the house of Mr. John Watson, a friend and relative of his mother, in the 29th year of his age. The circumstances attending his death were of a character peculiarly distressing to his relatives and friends. He had been ill for some days, but his disease was not regarded as dangerous, although at times he showed symptoms of aberration of mind. On the morning of his death he had concluded to send some clothes to the wash-woman, and whilst in the act of getting them out of his carpet sack he had occasion to remove a small self-loading pistol from a pair of drawers in which he had kept it wrapped up; in doing which he unwittingly discharged one of the barrels, the contents of which passing through his mouth, lodged in the back part of his head, causing death in about one hour. This is the account of the sad affair as given to us by Mr. Thomas Watson, who was the only person near the deceased at the time. Mr. Bigler had resided in the State of California since 1857, during which time he had followed his profession of Civil Engineer, accepting three years of the time, which he served in the United States Mint, at San Francisco, in a very responsible department. In February last, accompanied by his father and mother, who had been visiting friends in California, he returned on a visit to his native State and county, intending to return to the Pacific Coast during the summer or fall, but alas! he has gone to that bourne from whence no traveler returns. After an absence of nine years he was permitted, but for a brief period to enjoy the society of his relatives and friends. Reed was modest, kind hearted and generous; most beloved by those who knew him best. His deeply distressed parents and relatives have the sympathy of our community. We copy the following notice of him from the Philadelphia Age:

"In 1856, immediately after leaving school, Mr. Bigler entered upon the profession of civil engineering, on the Sunbury and Erie Railroad, a position which he filled to the entire satisfaction of the company. Upon the expiration of his engagement with that corporation, Mr. Bigler went to California, and was immediately associated with Mr. Kirk, an eminent engineer, in surveying the overland route from San Francisco to Salt Lake City, in Utah. At a subsequent period Mr. Bigler was appointed to a responsible post in the Corner's Department of the Mint at San Francisco, where he remained for two years, discharging the duties in such a manner as to secure the unlimited confidence of the director of that institution. In 1859, the Democrats of San Francisco nominated Mr. Bigler as a candidate for the position of City and County Surveyor. He failed of an election, though running far ahead of his associates, and again resumed his profession as a civil engineer and surveyor, in which capacity he acted as one of the exploring and locating engineers of the Pacific Railroad from Sacramento to Placerville. While employed by this company he ran three exploring lines over the Sierra Nevada Mountains, an undertaking which was attended with dangers and difficulties of an ordinary character. The Wellington road, from Walker river to Reese river, was also located by Mr. Bigler. In 1864 he was elected Chief Surveyor of Douglas county, an office which he declined, owing to a desire to return to his native State; and in 1866 he came back to Pennsylvania, where, in the prime of manhood, he has found a grave. Reed Bigler was a frank, honest and upright man, respected and beloved by all who knew him, and by his death the community will lose a valuable member, and his family a son and brother whom they dearly loved, and whose memory they will fondly cherish.

Both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Post Master General, find it impossible to carry out the designs of their respective departments in the Southern States, while the Congressional Test Oath remains unchanged, and they have appealed to the President, to recommend its modification or repeal to Congress. They also state that great loss will be entailed upon the Government, unless this request is granted by Congress.
