Next Congressman.
Mr. Editor.—The time is now approaching when the people of this Congressional District should be thinking about the selection of a Representative to succeed the present incumbent—Glenn W. Scofield. I take it for granted that neither he or any other man representing the sentiments he votes, can obtain a majority of the votes of this district, if the voters are permitted a fair and dispassionate expression of their opinions.

Next Congressman.
Firmly convinced of the truth of this conviction you may possibly aid in accomplishing a great public good by giving publicity to the following views and suggestions of one who has spent much anxious thought upon the subject—one who has no personal end or aim beyond that which belongs to the "general welfare," to accomplish, —one who is not a politician, and can in no sense claim membership with the Democratic party. All admit that party spirit has been carried to excess; and many claim that the late devastating war, and the present deplorable and distracted condition of our once happy, prosperous and perfectly united country is clearly traceable to the virulence of party spirit. Be the cause what it may, it is now unmistakably the duty of every patriot to pursue that course which is best calculated to restore peace and good will between the people of the Northern and Southern States—if that be possible. Representative men of the South say it is so far as they are concerned. They tell us that, having appealed to the sword, they have made up their minds to submit to its decision in good faith, and more than that: As if for the purpose of appeasing the spirit of Abolitionism—after Congress having solemnly resolved that the war waged for no purpose of "aggression," or of interference with "established institutions of any of the States"—they have cordially assented to the total abolition of their cherished institution by Constitutional amendment. With the hope of restoring peaceful relations between the sections so lately belligerent, they have done many, yes, all other things that, as a Christian people they can be asked to do. And what have we of the North done? It is answered, we are not required to do anything. But are we not exacting too much? They offer to come back, and be part of us and help us pay our debts, and defend us against our enemies; but we say "No, we are not ready to do that. We will punish you, not as individuals, but as communities—as States. We will tax you, make you help pay our debts, and fight our battles, but we will not extend to you the privileges of freemen—the right of representation."

Here is the issue between the President and the majority of Congress. The President seeing that the objects of the war are fully accomplished, that peace is fully restored, and that there is not a hostile arm in rebellion against the National authority, is in favor of the admission of the Southern Senators and Representatives—well knowing that each House still retains the power to expel any of its members for cause. In this he is but carrying out what he believes to be the wishes of a vast majority of the people of the whole country: and is no doubt doing precisely what the lamented Lincoln would do, if living.

Against him is arrayed a large majority in both branches of Congress under the lead of Sumner, in the one, and Stevens, in the other—two men so extremely radical in their views that it is safe to assume that there are not a dozen men, either in the Senate or House, who are willing to go to the full length that they do in favor of negro equality. Yet the entire Legislation of the country is under their control. Mr. Stevens, not a word need be said to any Pennsylvanian. His character is fully given in the history of the Buckshot war. Does any one suppose that this "old sinner" is any less a revolutionist now at 80 than he was then at 50? and were it possible, the principles and prejudices of Sumner are even more dangerous than those of Stevens.

In such a contest, when the issue are so broad and so momentous, can there be any doubt upon which side will be arrayed the honest and reflecting portion of the people? Is there a single Congressional district in Pennsylvania, in which this issue is clearly and distinctly presented to the people, which will fail to sustain the President? I think not; and so thinking call upon all men in the district who think as I do, to bestir themselves without delay.

No man is a good Democrat, or a good Republican, who is unwilling to sacrifice his party for his country—his politics for patriotism. I believe there is quite enough of this kind of patriotism in this district to carry it. Our present member has taken the lead in the denunciation of the President Next to Forney, he is the most violent. Nothing but the blindest obedience to party rule could secure for him, or for any other man who is not openly and avowedly with the President and against the radicals, the united Republican vote of the District. The Democrats are too far in the minority to afford a reasonable hope of success, should they make a regular nomination. It is then the opportunity of the conservative, or, if you please, of the Johnson Republicans. Let them take the initiative, and decide upon the man. We have many from whom to select. Erie county can furnish half a dozen; Warren county can give us Carlton B. Curtis, (an old member) Clearfield James B. Graham, and no doubt there are others; all men of the very highest character; and either of whom the Democrats—being unanimous for the President—as against the radicals in Congress—would delight to support. Such a movement would be triumphantly successful; and not only so, but it would be such a rebuke to dangerous men and destructive principles as would not be forgotten for at least half a generation.

Every patriot should remember—and there are patriots belonging to all parties—that our country is not yet saved; that it is beset with many perils. And they should know, before it is too late, that the only way to save it is for them to lay aside their character as partisans and act the part of patriots. Respectfully, L. T. L.

Sir Morton Peto's Village.—The London correspondent of a Cincinnati paper describes a village called South-end, built at the mouth of the Thames by Sir Morton Peto, who recently visited the United States. The writer says: "When he bought and leased the land on which this pretty village stands, fifteen years ago, he was simply Morton Peto. It was by his patriotic energy in constructing government railways in the Crimea during the Russian war, that he won his title. It is said that he has only had time to visit this place twice during the fifteen years, and on each visit he stopped only two or three hours. He is also famous for being the great layman of the Baptist denomination in England. His liberality to struggling churches and ministers is very great; and if a little church can get Sir Morton to smile upon it its fortune is made."

An Item for Tax-Payers.—Pennsylvania will have to pay as her share of the expenses of the Freedmen's Bureau for the current year one million five hundred thousand dollars. Persons who are captivated with this investment and are anxious that the securities shall be kept in the market, cannot do a better thing than vote for Geary, the Bureau candidate, while those who prefer the society of white men will vote for Heister Clymer.

Indictments of a Clergyman.—Three indictments have been found in Missouri against the Rev. B. F. Kenny, an aged and eloquent Baptist clergyman, for preaching without taking the "test oath." On these indictments he was arrested at his house about dark and compelled to ride a distance of ten miles to a place where the next morning he gave security to appear for trial. He is 61 years of age, and has been preaching over 40 years. This is another freak of "loyalty."

Jefferson Davis.—A correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger writes: "It is understood that Attorney General Speed has given the opinion that no further legislation is necessary to provide for the trial of Jefferson Davis either upon the charge of treason or complicity in the assassination conspiracy." The Attorney General must have had a terrible time, in deciding that which every body knows.

The Illness of Gen. Cass.—A letter from Detroit states that Gen. Cass is failing fast. The veteran statesman passes most of his time in sleep, undisturbed. At rare intervals he wakes up sufficiently to ask for some of his old friends, who are sent for; but on arriving, even within the hour, he is generally asleep again. His disease is softening of the brain.

Gen. Thos. Francis Meagher, now acting Governor of Montana, has recanted his radical opinions, and come out for President Johnson.
