

Financial and Commercial.
"There is nothing so insidious as financial difficulty. It approaches first with smiles and caresses, and is like the cub of the lioness taken into the house of the hunter, fawning upon his children when young, but spreading destruction around when it arrived at its full maturity." Such was the language used the other day by the English Chancellor of the Exchequer, when detailing the financial condition of Government to the people of Great Britain. There could not be a better illustration of the peculiar relation debt bears to a nation than that of the destructive, blood-thirsty and treacherous animal, a playful kitten when young, but a savage destroyer when at maturity, carried in its harmless infancy into the family, domesticated with them, only to fasten its fangs into their vitals ere it leaves them, and rend them to pieces.

The minds of the people of the United States have been debauched upon the subject of national debts. It is a humiliating spectacle to see millions of intelligent men who know that debt to them individually would be a positive curse, subscribe to the abominable doctrines of the Jay Cooke family of the country, that a public debt is a public blessing. Every sane man knows that private indebtedness is one of the most heart-crushing afflictions that was ever visited upon a human being, unless the said human being is as obtuse on the subject of moral obligation as a highwayman. Who first thus attempted to poison the minds of the masses regarding the character of a great national debt? The capitalists of the present party in power. They saw that their schemes would impoverish the people at large, that the prostration of the South would finally contract the property-creating power of the country. They understood the condition of England's people—a few very rich and a huge mass very poor. The national debt of England had solidified to poverty the producing classes, and strengthened the consolidation of wealth. It had fixed the status of the workingman, poor to-day, poor and ignorant for all time; but it had insured the growth of the rich, who, as time rolls on, must grow still richer. In order to soothe the restless and chafed spirit of English workmen, in order to induce them to carry the debt of four thousand millions of dollars on their shoulders, the "blessings" of that burden was constantly held up to them, and when it was necessary to burden this country with a national curse of like character, the same hypocritical cant was used to befoul the ignorant but honest toilers and wealth-creators here. "A national debt is a national blessing." This blessing came in the shape of extra privations, no luxuries, less comforts, huge taxation on the little store which might be laid at the end of the year through heroic self-denial of the necessities of life.

The Jay Cooke family throughout the country found the debt a blessing, indeed, to them. They were enabled to heap up riches with a rapidity unparalleled in the history of wealth-getting, and the faster they increased in wealth the poorer the wealth producers grew. All the taxes collected in this country are placed to the manufactured cost of the articles produced, and the poorer classes, who are the great majority of the people, have to pay them. Those who are taxed directly have the means of recovering their taxes. The manufacturers charge the merchant, and the merchant charges the consumer. The capitalists of the country control the productions. The few sell to the many the goods loaded with taxes, and the many stagger under the load, while the privileged few escape. It is this few who are preaching up the "blessings" of the great debt, in order to keep the many from ascertaining exactly the source of all the privations they suffer from to-day.

The workingmen are restless and complaining; their money does not hold out as of old: their week's wages, though twice as high as ever before, does not balance expenses. They cannot make both ends meet, and instead of ascertaining the true cause of their condition, and recognizing the futility of "strikes" and a demand for "higher pay," they are resorting to the latter expedient, which only tends to aggravate the evils of their present condition, and are blind to the truth that it is the inevitable workings of the "blessing" which have rendered their position so unfortunate. Strikes for higher pay can bring no relief, as higher pay only enhances the cost of all they consume, and the more labor demands per week, the more it will cost per week to support it. Carry the price of the workingman's services to ever so high a figure, yet he will remain in the same desperate financial condition. It is the same way all national blessings of the public debt character benefits a people. The productive power of the United States is not half that of England. She has $42,000,000,000 in property, which is handled yearly in some shape or other, and through that handling an increase is made; yet, notwithstanding England's great wealth, an addition of ten per cent to her debt would destroy her as a monarchy, for the people would break down, and the support of her lazy aristocracy and nobility would give way. Human nature could not endure an increased burden of that debt.

We have $12,000,000,000 of wealth to handle in some shape or other, and we get a bigger yearly return from it than England does from her huge resources, two and a-half times greater. The revenue of the United States last year was $545,000,000,000, the largest sum of money every raised by any nation in one year through taxation. This great strain upon the strength of the nation will break it down. No power, no people on earth could stand it. The paws of the young cub, which a year ago were so soft and velvety, now begin to show the claws. The big debt pinches badly. This year incomes have fallen off; returns are lessened; workmen feel the weight of the debt; false oaths are taken; New England has fewer watches, fewer pianos, less silver than ever before, and men are now openly contriving how to evade the beautiful and healthy results of the great national blessing. Next year the young cub will show more of nature, and begin to smell round for prey, and as time rolls on, the true character of the beast will be fully developed.

ELECTION AT ST. LOUIS.—On the 10th inst., an election was held at St. Louis for city Auditor, which resulted in the choice of Mr. Peers, conservative, over Mr. Bowman, radical, and a very popular candidate, by a majority of 1,800 votes out of 5,000. The first ward, almost exclusively German, hitherto largely radical, went for the conservative candidate by 85 majority.

THE CAUSE OF IT.—A story is told of a man in Indiana who had been in declining health for months, and was much afflicted with ague. He took a heavy dose of quinine, which caused him to vomit violently. In the process of vomiting he expelled from his stomach a live snake eleven inches long and of the thickness of an ordinary pipe stem.

RELEASED.—Dr. Payne, who was convicted of being a Confederate spy, and condemned to death, but whose sentence was subsequently commuted to imprisonment for life, was released from the Ohio penitentiary last week, under an order from the War Department to discharge 15 of the military prisoners confined at that place.

REMOVAL OF REMAINS.—The remains of Gen. Richard Henry Lee (father of Robert E. Lee) are to be removed from Georgia to Lexington, by order of the Virginia Legislature, and will be re-interred the 10th of September next, on the occasion of the re-inauguration of the Washington statue.

LARGE ROBBERY.—The office of A. Pardee & Co., coal operators at Hazleton, Pa., was robbed of $15,000 on Thursday last. The safe containing the funds was blown open and the money extracted about two o'clock in the morning.

The Empoor-Napoleon has ordered an immense number of needles to be manufactured at once for the French army.

Thirty-four thousand emigrants arrived at New York during the month of June.

Fifty removals were made in the New York custom-house last week.

out of the best material the market will afford, and made by experienced workman, all of which I will sell at either wholesale or retail prices surprisingly low. I ask those in need of anything in this line to call and examine my ware and satisfy themselves that it is made for use. Country Merchants desiring to purchase small lots of Ware will find it to their advantage to buy of me.

Also a large stock of the best kind of Stove-ware.

And last though not least in my line of business, is that of Spouting.

I am prepared to fill all orders in this line on short notice, and manufactured out of the best material. I want every body that comes to town, to come and take a look at my show, and see for themselves. I am going to sell the cheapest and best Wares ever offered in this vicinity. I have several "Tropic Heating" and "Parlor Cook" Stoves that I will sell at cost, to close out the stock for the Season. Try me. Feb 7th 1864—G. S. LEGAL.
