

Wit and Humor.

"A little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men."

To prevent flies from getting at your bacon in summer—eat it in the spring.

Why is a lady of fashion like a successful sportsman? Because she bags the hare.

Why should the birds feel depressed early in a summer morning? Because their bills are all over dew!

Isn't there an awfully strong smell of pigs in the air? asked Smith of Jones. "Yes," replied Jones, "that's because the wind is from the southwest."

Weak doses of washboard are now recommended to ladies who complain of dyspepsia. Young men troubled in the same way may be cured by a strong preparation of wood-saw.

"I don't like to patronize this line," said a culprit to the hangman, who was adjusting the noose around his neck. "O never mind this once," replied the hangman, "it will soon suspend its operation."

A Yankee girl, who wished to hire herself out, was asked if she had any followers or sweethearts. After a little hesitation, she replied: "Well, now, can't exactly say. I be a sorter courted, and a sorter not. Reckon more a sorter yes than a sorter no."

"A daily newspaper man, who has just gone out of the traces, says he is becoming quite well acquainted with his family. He shortly discovered, to his great surprise, that his daughter could play quite well upon the piano. He never had time to discover the fact before."

Between two of the shining lights of an "up-town church" in Louisville, a gentleman of seventy and a lady of fifty-four, hymenial fires were lately kindled, but the "old man" cruelly extinguished the flames, and the heart-broken matron sobs for breach of promise.

A Western farmer, being obliged to sell a yoke of oxen to pay his hired man told him he could not keep him any longer.

"Why," said the man, "I'll stay and take some of your cows in place of money."

"But what shall I do," said the farmer, "when my cows and oxen are all gone?"

"Why, you can work for me and get them back."

As HIGH as a HOGHEAD.—An arch little fellow told his pretty cousin that he could jump as high as a hoghead in the yard, full of rainwater. "Impossible," said she. "Well," said he, "if you will go out with me I'll prove it to you." They together went, and the lad jumped up about a foot, snickering all the while. "Why, that isn't a quarter as high as the hoghead," said the little girl. "Well," said the boy, "you may see if the hoghead can jump higher, if you have a mind to. But I don't believe the hoghead can jump as high as I can."

MAN UNDER THE BED.—Most of the unmarried ladies enjoy a pleasant delusion. They seem to think that men have a mania for getting under beds. Accordingly very few of them retire for the night without first going through the ceremony of looking under the bed. Delightful as are the illusions of hope which beguile us for years, we have never known but one instance in which the search was rewarded by success. The discovery was announced by a little scream of delight, and the lucky lady was congratulated by her companion with the remark, "Well, Jane, I am glad you have found one—for to my certain knowledge you have been looking for him for these twenty years."

A handsome young girl was set up with one night by a noble specimen of the true American, with a scissor in his vest pocket. "I mean a dry good's clerk," and the mother hearing something pop, rose from her couch under the impression that her eldest boy was holding a wild revel on the roof beam in the west room. But, on opening the door, she discovered it was hugging and kissing which awakened her from her peaceful repose.

"My darter, my darter!" this fond parent did cry. "O that I should live to see this doin' in my house!"

"I know, mother," this sweet maiden did to her mother quick reply, "that it's improper, but it's so awful soothin'."

Some "old fogey" perpetrates the following:

FARMERS IN 1776.
Man to the plow,
Wife to the cow,
Girl to the yarn,
Boy to the barn,
And all done settled.

FARMERS IN 1867.
Man a mere show,
Girl at play,
Wife—silk and satin,
Boy—Greek and Latin,
And all hands gaudied.

A western contemporary, after reading the above, advocates the establishment of seminaries for young ladies where spinology, knitolgry, weavology, cookology, &c., can be taught—the graduates to receive the degree of F. F. W., or Fit for Wives.

PAYING LIKE A SINNER.—Several years ago, in North Carolina, where it is customary for the tavern-keepers to charge the ministers nothing for lodging and refreshments, a preacher presuming stopped at a tavern one evening, made himself comfortable during the night, and in the morning entered the stage without offering pay for his accommodations. The landlord soon came running up to the stage, and said:

"There is some one who has not settled his bill!"

The passengers all said they had, but the preacher, who said he understood that he never charged ministers anything.

"What? you a minister of the gospel—a man of God?" cried the innkeeper. "You came to my house last night; you sat down at the table without a blessing; I lit you up to your room, and you went to bed without praying to your Maker for I stood there until you retired; you rose and washed without saying grace; and as you came to my house as a sinner, and not as a drunk like a sinner, you have got to pay like a sinner!"

Religious Miscellany.

"Diving and fishing on pearls in the sea, Blame not the ocean, the fault is in thee!"

"Have communion with few, Be familiar with one, Deal justly with all, Speak evil of none."

Keep a good conscience. Guilt breeds discontent and remorse. The cheerful apostle said, "This is our rejoicing, even the testimony of our consciences."

Men call sin an accident. It is ignorance; it is infirmity; it is temptation; it is this, or that other periphrasis or softening phrase. But the apostle wants the minds of thoughtful men to be fixed on the exceeding sinfulness of sins. He desires that it should be understood that such is the universality, the unity, the solidarity of God's law, that the man that attempts to strike the crystal orb in one point strikes clear through it.

LITTLE ACTS.—God does not require great things of us, "for He knoweth our frame; He remembereth that we are dust." He only asks that we shall serve Him in the little, every-day acts of life. Jesus served God as truly, when, as a boy, He worked for his father, as when in latter life "He went about doing good." It is not the act but the consecrated spirit which attracts the approval of God:

"A servant with this clause,
Makes drudgery divine:
Who sweeps a room, as for thy laws,
Makes that and the action fine."

HUMILITY.—A farmer went with his son into a wheat field, to see if it was ready for the harvest.

"See, father!" exclaimed the boy, "how straight these hold their heads. They must be the best ones. Those that hang their heads down I am sure are not good for much."

The father plucked a stalk of each kind, and said: "See here foolish boy! This stalk that stood so straight and high is light-headed, and almost good for nothing; while this, that hangs its head so modestly, is full of the most beautiful grain."

WANT OF SOCIABILITY.—A correspondent of the Lutheran and Missionary thus illustrates the secret of the want of growth in many churches: "I have been sitting near some folks for years, and we meet every Sunday in the aisles or in the vestibule, but they have never said 'good morning' or 'good evening' nor 'how do you do' nor anything. They never smiled at me, they never looked even as if they knew me. I tried formerly, and more than once, to look as if I knew each other, and attempted to get up a sort of smile of recognition; but they looked like the Egyptian Sphinx, and I gave it up as a hopeless case."

THE LOSS OF A SOUL.—What—if it be lawful to indulge in such a thought what would be the funeral obsequies of a lost soul? Where shall we find the tears fit to be wept at such a spectacle? or could we realize the calamity in all its extent, what tokens of commiseration and concern would be deemed equal to the occasion? Would it suffice for the sun to veil his light and the moon her brightness? To cover the ocean with mourning, and the heavens with sackcloth? Or, were the whole fabric of nature to become arid and vocal, would it be possible for her to utter a groan too deep, or a cry too piercing to express the magnitude and extent of such a catastrophe?

Make personal effort for the salvation of others. Accept and create opportunities for leading or pointing others to Christ. Gratitude to your Saviour and love for souls will lead you to love. You may find in this labor of love, crosses to be borne, but the direct returns of light and strength in your own soul will amply repay you. Strength in the physical world springs from struggling. There is weakness in the limb that has not carried a burden. The limb that has not carried a burden is undeveloped, who has not had severe battles with the enemy, or who has not performed trying duties for the cause. God will richly bless you in these attempts to extend His Kingdom. You will learn to delight in it. You will be securing a starry crown.

Young converts, persons who are just beginning in earnest a Christian life, usually are full of Christ, are enthusiastic in their utterances, and are fond of giving expression to their new found love or zeal. Too often, however, in the later struggles either of life, of Christian experience, or of faith, men fall off, so that you do not know them to be Christians unless you meet them in the church. There are hundreds of professors of religion that you would not know to be such. There is nothing wrong about them, they have no vice, they are guilty of no crime, but there is no power, no warmth, no beauty, no attractiveness in them. They either never knew, or have quite forgotten, that, aside from certain great staple Christian qualities of truth, and sincerity, and divine love and reverence, and obedience, there is to be unfolded a beauty.

We are passing toward that rest ourselves. Do not regret it if the eyes grow dim. You will see better by and by. If the ear is growing heavy, do not be sorry. If your youth is passing, and your beauty is fading do not mourn. If your hand trembles, do not be depressed in spirit. With every impediment, with every sign of the taking down of this tabernacle, remember that it is striking the tent that the march may begin, and then when next you pitch your tabernacle it shall be on undisturbed shores, and that there, with eyes unwept with tears, through an atmosphere undimmed by clouds, and before a God unveiled and never to be wrapped in darkness any more—that there, looking back upon this world of ignorance and suffering and trouble, and upon the hardships of the way, you will, with full and discerning reason, lift up your voice and give thanks to God, and say, "There was not one trouble too much; there was not one sorrow too heavy; there was not one sorrow too piercing." And you will thank God, in that land, for the very things that wrings tears from your eyes in this. Look, then, to that better land, out of all the trouble of the way, sigh for it, pray for it, and enter into it.
