CURIOS MEDLEY.
By the lake where dropped the willow,
Row, row, row, row,
I want to be an angel,
And Jerry Jim Crow.
As old crew and on a hickory limb,
Saw him but to praise,
Let me kiss him for his mother,
For he smelt of Schweitzer kase.
The minister to the war has gone,
With the banjo on his knee;
He swears to hear the seniors shriek,
There's a light in the window for thee.
A frog he would a wooing go,
His hair was curled to kill;
He used to wear an old gray coat,
And the sword of Bunker Hill.
Off in the still night,
Make way for liberty! he cried;
I won't go home till morning,
With Peggy by my side.
I am dying, Egypt, dying,
Suzannah, don't you cry;
Know how sublime a thing it is
To brush away the blue-tailed fly.
The boy stood on the burning deck,
With his baggage checked for Troy;
One of the few immortal names,
His name was Malley.
Mary had a little lamb,
He could a tale unfold;
He had no teeth to eat a horse's nose,
As his spectacles were gold.
Lay on, lay on, Macduff,
Man wants but little here below;
And I'm to be queen of the May,
So kiss me quick and go.

IMPORTANT LETTER FROM CAPT. WIRZ'S COUNSEL.

Where Does the Responsibility for the Andersonville Murders Rest?

To the American People:

Intending to leave the United States for some time, I feel it my duty before I start, to fulfill, in part, a promise which, a few hours before his death, I gave to my unfortunate client, Captain Wirz, who was executed at Washington, on the 10th day of November, 1865. Protesting up to the last moment his innocence of those monstrous crimes with which he was charged, he received my word that, having failed to save him from a felon's doom, I would, as long as I lived, do everything in my power to clear his memory. I did that the more readily, as I was then already perfectly convinced that he suffered wrongfully. Since that time, his unfortunate children, both here and in Europe, have constantly implored me to wipe out the terrible stains which now cover the name of their father. Though times do not seem propitious for obtaining full justice, yet, considering that man is mortal, I will, before entering upon a perilous voyage, perform my duty to those innocent orphans and also to myself.

I will now give a brief statement of the causes which led to the arrest and execution of Captain Wirz. In April, 1865, President Johnson issued a proclamation stating that, from evidence in the possession of the "Bureau of Military Justice," it appeared that Jefferson Davis was implicated in the assassination of President Lincoln, and for that reason the President offered a reward of $100,000 for the capture of the then fugitive ex-President of the Southern Confederacy. That testimony has since been found to be entirely false and a mere fabrication, and the suborner, Conover, is now under sentence in the jail of this city, the two perjurers, whom he suborned, having turned States evidence against him, whilst the individual, by whom he was suborned, has not yet been brought to justice.

Certain high and influential enemies of Jefferson Davis, either then already aware of the character of the testimony of those witnesses, or not thinking their testimony quite sufficient to hang Jeff. Davis, expected to find the wanting material in the terrible mortality of Union prisoners at Andersonville. Orders were issued accordingly to arrest a subaltern officer, Captain Wirz, a poor, friendless and wounded prisoner of war, (he being included in the surrender of General Johnston,) and besides a foreigner by birth. On the 7th of May he was placed in the Old Capitol Prison at Washington, and from that time the greater part of the Northern press was engaged in forming the man in the eyes of the people into such a monster that it became almost impossible for him to obtain counsel. Even his countryman, the Swiss Consul General, publicly refused to accept money to defray the expenses of the trial! He was doomed before he was heard—and even the permission to be heard according to law was denied him. To increase the excitement and give edat to the proceeding, and to inflame still more the public mind, the trial took place under the very dome of the Capitol of the nation. A Military Commission, presided over by one of the most arbitrary and despotic generals in the country, was formed, and the paroled prisoner of war, his wounds still open, and so feeble that he had to recline before the trial on a sofa, carried before the same. How that trial was conducted the whole world knows. The enemies of generosity and humanity believed it then to be a sure thing to get at Jeff. Davis.

Therefore, the first charge was that of conspiracy between Wirz, Jefferson Davis, Seddon, Howell Cobb, R. B. Winder and a number of others, to kill the Union prisoners. The trial lasted for three months, but unfortunately for the bloodthirsty investigators not a particle of evidence was produced, showing the existence of such a conspiracy; yet Captain Wirz was found guilty of that charge! Having thus failed, another effort was made. On the night before the execution of the prisoner a telegram was sent to the Northern press from this city, stating that Wirz had made important disclosures to General L. C. Baker, the well known detective, implicating Jeff. Davis, and that the confession would probably be given to the public. On the same evening some parties came to the confessor of Wirz, Rev. Father Boyle, and also to me, one of them informing me that a high Cabinet officer wished to assure Wirz that if he would implicate Jefferson Davis with the atrocities committed at Andersonville, his sentence would be commuted. He, the messenger, or whoever he was, requested me to inform Wirz of this. In presence of Father Boyle, I told Wirz next morning what had happened. The Captain simply and quietly replied, "Mr. Schade, you know that I have always told you that I do not know anything about Jefferson Davis. He had no connection with me as to what was done at Andersonville. If I knew anything of him I would not become a traitor against him or anybody else, even to save my life." He likewise denied that he had made any statement whatever to General Baker. Thus ended the attempt to suborn Captain Wirz against Jefferson Davis. That alone shows what a man he was. How many of his defamers would have done the same? With his wounded arm in a sling the poor, paroled prisoner mounted, two hours later, the scaffold. His last words were that he died innocent—and so did.

The 10th day of November, 1865, will indeed be a black stain on the pages of American history.

To weaken the effect of his declaration of innocence and of the noble manner in which Wirz died, a telegram was manufactured here and sent North, stating that on the 27th day of October, Mrs. Wirz, (who actually was nine hundred miles on that day away from Washington) had been prevented by that Stantonian deus ex machina, Gen. L. C. Baker, from poisoning her husband! Thus, on the same day, when the unfortunate family lost their husband and father, a cowardly and atrocious attempt was made to blacken their character also. On the next day I branded the whole as an infamous lie, and since then I never have heard of it again, though it emanated from a Brigadier General of the United States Army.

All those who were charged with having conspired with Captain Wirz have since been released, except Jefferson Davis, the prisoner of the American "Castle Chillon." Capt. Winder was let off without a trial, and if any of the others have been tried, which I do not know, certainly none of them have been hung. As Captain Wirz could not conspire alone, nobody will now, in view of that important fact, consider him guilty of that charge. So much, then, for charge No. 1.

As to charge No. 2, to wit: Murder, in violation of the laws and customs of war, I do not hesitate to declare what 145, out of 160, witnesses on both sides declared during the trial—that Captain Wirz never murdered or killed any Union prisoners with his own hands or otherwise. All those witnesses (about twelve to fifteen) who testified that they saw Captain Wirz kill a prisoner, have sworn falsely, abundant proofs of that assertion being in existence. The hands of Captain Wirz are clear of the blood of prisoners of war. He would certainly have at least intimated to me a knowledge of the alleged murder with which he was charged. In most all cases no names of the alleged murdered men could be given, and where it was done, no such persons could be identified. The terrible scene in court, when he was confronted with one of the witnesses, and the latter insisting that Wirz was the man who killed a certain Union prisoner, which irritated the prisoner so much that he almost fainted, will still be remembered. That man (Grey) swore falsely, and God alone knows what the poor innocent prisoner must have suffered at that moment! The scene was depicted and illustrated in the Northern newspapers as if Wirz had broken down on account of his guilt. Seldom has a mortal suffered more than that friendless and forsaken man.

Fearing lest this communication will be too long, I will merely speak of the principal and most intelligent of those false witnesses who testified to individual murder on the part of Captain Wirz. Upon his testimony the Judge Advocate in his final argument laid particular stress on account of his intelligence. This witness prepared also pictures of the alleged cruelties of Wirz, which were handed to the commission and are now on record, copies of which appeared at the time in Northern illustrated papers. He swore that his name was Felix de la Baume, and represented himself as a Frenchman and a grand nephew of Marquis de Lafayette. After having so well testified and shown so much zeal, he received a recommendation, signed by the members of the commission. On the eleventh day of October, before the taking of the testimony was concluded, he was appointed to a clerkship in the Department of the Interior. This occurred whilst one of the witnesses for the defence (Duncan) was arrested in open court, and placed in prison before he had testified. After the execution of Captain Wirz some of the Germans of Washington recognized in de la Baume a deserter from the 7th New York (Steuben) regiment, whose name was not de la Baume, but Felix Oeser, a native of Saxony. They went to Secretary Harlan, and he dismissed the impostor and important witness in the Wirz trial on the 21st of November, eleven days after the execution. Nobody who is acquainted with the Conover testimony in consequence of which the President of the United States was falsely induced to place a reward of $100,000 upon the head of an innocent man, will be astonished at the above disclosures of the character of testimony before Military Commissions. So much for charge No. 2.

If from twelve to fifteen witnesses could be found who were willing to testify to so many acts of murder on the part of Wirz, there must certainly have been no lack of such who were willing to swear to minor offenses. Such was the unnatural state of public mind against the prisoner at that time, that such men regarded themselves, not to speak of such as Butler and Conover, then as we may well question whether the "Star Spangled Banner" still waves over the land of the free or the home of the brave." A noble and brave soldier never permits his antagonist to be calumniated and trampled upon after an honorable surrender. Besides notwithstanding the decision of the highest legal tribunal in the land, that Military Commissions are unconstitutional; the earnest and able protestations of President Johnson, and the sad results of Military Commissions, yet each Military Commission are again established, by recent legislation of Congress, all over the suffering and starving South.

History is just, and as Mr. Lincoln used to say, we cannot escape history. Puritanical hypocrisy, self-adulation and self-glorification will not save those enemies of liberty from their just punishment.

Not even a Christian burial of the remains of Captain Wirz has been allowed by Secretary Stanton. They still lie, side by side, with those of another and acknowledged victim of Military Commissions, the unfortunate Mrs. Surratt, in the yard of the former jail in this city.

If anybody should desire to reply to this, I politely beg that it may be done before the 1st of May next, as then I shall leave the country to return in the fall. After that day, letters will reach me in care of the American Legation, or Mr. Beneditto Bolzan, Leipzig street, No. 38, Berlin, Prussia.

American Boys.
Probably in every age since the time of poor Adam and Eve's trouble with their willful son, the world has been supposed to be near its end on account of the naughtiness of boys. We confess that, for ourselves, in moments of wrath at the impish perversity, or of sorrow at the precocious wickedness of noted specimens of American boyhood, we have sometimes been tempted to that supposition, and certainly we could not much wonder if Young America furnished more food for the prophet's avenging bears than Young Israel supplied. Yet the world has continued to be, and generation after generation has risen from petticoats to jackets and trousers, and from jackets and trousers to coats and pantaloons, without any utter extinction of the line of masculine succession. That succession will probably be kept up in this hemisphere, and here, as of old, the folly of youth will, in due time, be subdued by the wisdom of age.

Our daughters are constitutionally more marked by sensibility, and our sons are more marked by wilfulness. The consequence is that we are more anxious what will happen to our daughters—and the daughter's sensitiveness exposing her to receive harm, and the son's wilfulness exposing him to do harm. We are not wise to quarrel with nature, and we must expect that boys will be more noisy and mischievous than girls; nay, we may count it a good sign of a lad's force of character, if there is a good share of aggressive fun-loving pluck in his composition. Well managed, his animal spirits will give him all the more manly loyalty, and, when true to the right cause, he will be all the more true because so much living sap has gone up into the fruit of his obedience.

Yet what is more sad than force of will perverted to base uses, and the strength of manhood sunk into the service of base lusts or fenshish passions? What is more sad than the sight presented daily in our streets—the scores of precocious mannikins with the worst vices of men written over features almost infantile in their mould—boys who are hardly old enough to be beyond their mother's watch, now swaggering with all the airs of experienced bloods, and polluting the air of God's heaven with the vocabulary of hell? Where such monstrous excesses are not found, how frequent is the utter repudiation of the proper reverence to age and authority! How many a stripling among us seems to think it the very first proof of manly spirit to break the Divine law which gives the home its blessedness and the state its security, and to be proud to show that he is above all such obsolete notions as giving honor to father or mother.

Evils of Gossip.—I have known a country society which withered away all to nothing under the dry rot of gossip only. Friendships, once as firm as granite, dissolved to jelly, and then ran away to water, only because of this; love, that promised a future as enduring as heaven and as stable as truth, evaporated in a morning mist, that turned to a day's long tears only because of this; a father and a son were set foot to foot with the fiery breath of an anger that would never cool again between them, only because of this; and a husband and his young wife, each straining at the heated leash which in the beginning had been the golden bondage of a God-blessed love, set mournfully by the side of the grave where all their love and all their joy lay buried, and only because of this. Great crimes work great wrong, and the deeper tragedies of human life spring from its larger passions; but woeful and most mournful are the uncalculated tragedies that issue from gossip and detraction; most mournful the shipwreck often made of noble natures and lovely lives by the bitter winds and dead salt waters of slander. So easy to say, yet so hard to disprove—throwing on the innocent all the burden and the strain of demonstrating their innocence, and punishing them as guilty if unable to pluck out the stings they never see, and to silence words they never hear—gossip and slander are the deadliest and the cruelest weapons man has forged for his brother's hurt.

Reverend Fugitives from Labor.—I regret to say that nearly two-thirds of the clergy of New York are just now suffering from severe attacks of sore throat, or bronchial affections, for which the doctors say there is no remedy save in a voyage across the Atlantic, and a sojourn of a week or two at the Paris exposition. Vestry men are run down with applications for the necessary two months leave, while finance committees are daily put to their wits to raise the wind in order to defray Rev. Mr. So's traveling expenses hither and thither. "The sermons of late, have been very dreary on this state of things, and I suppose there is no remedy for it, but that they should all go, leaving us 'miserable sinners' to look after ourselves, here at home, during the hot weather, as best we may." The Canadian steamer that sailed to-day had no fewer than six of these sore-throated gentlemen on board, while by the packets to sail next Saturday, I am informed that double that number will go. We do not read that Paul, or Peter, or Andrew, or James, or John, or any of the rest of the Apostles were ever troubled with bronchial affections in the spring of the year. They did a good deal of travelling, to be sure, but it wasn't to see the world's fairs, and the expenses were totally defrayed by themselves.

"Why do you not admire my lovely daughter?" said a proud mother to a gentleman. "Because," he replied, "I am no judge of paintings." "But surely," replied the lady, not in the least disconcerted by this rude reflection, "you never saw an angel that was not painted."
A wag after hearing a very insipid dialogue between two noodles, exclaimed: "As Dolly and Dezer were walking one day, Says Dolly to Dezer, 'why, Dezer, I say.' 'Well Dolly, what have you to say unto Dezer?' 'Why, Dezer, I really don't know es.' Which is the amount of a good many conversations."

A Willow Grove, Montgomery county "lady," thinking she had occasion to thrash a certain lawyer, proceeded to do so. By a lucky chance for the lawyer, the fair one made a mistake and thrashed a champion of the legal gentleman. As a stick of wood was used, the "companion" doesn't think he was honored by the damsel's choice.
At a religious meeting among the blacks, a colored preacher requested that some one should pray. Thereupon half-witted Moses commenced a string of words entirely without meaning. At this the pastor raised his head and inquired—'Who's dat prayin' for? Dat you brudder Moss? Jest hold on, brudder Moss, you let somebody pray dat's better acquainted wid de Lord.'
