

Religious Miscellany. Let but men be prepared to labor, and God is prepared to bless their labor.

All that is in us ought to be brought to God to be submitted to His influence, either that he may overcome it, or that he may consecrate it. Let us open our whole heart to Him, with all trust in his love. Let us not fear that he would punish us by answering our prayer. We may pray with freedom; God lays no snare for us.

Young man, pay attention. Don't be a loafer, don't keep loafers' company, don't hang about loafing places. Better work than sit around day after day, or stand about corners with your hands in your pockets. Better for your own health—better for your own prospects. Bustle about, if you mean to have anything to bustle about for. Many a poor physician has obtained a real patient by riding after an imaginary one. A quire of blank paper, tied with red tape, carried under a lawyer's arm, may procure him his first case, and make his fortune. Such is the world; to him that hath shall be given. Quit dreaming and complaining; keep busy and mind your chances.

What! forty years a Christian, and nothing to tell but that you were once born again? Suppose a man should continually, until he was fifty years old or more, want his old nurse to tell, over and over, how he was born, how he cried, and the whole history of his babyhood—is there nothing later in his experience to be remembered? Is there no such thing as growth—is there no such thing as variety? Are there no such things as victories? No man can go round the world, even as a navigator, without meeting endless change of scene and phenomena, endless variety, endless beauty, endless wonders, and shall a man navigate the eternal sphere, with all the power of the heavenly kingdom upon him, without having from day to day new experiences? Shall a man live a Christian life and have no conflicts, no doubts, no fears, no strange victories, no visions, no aspirations, no sorrows, no joys, no more, no rest, no go away, your barren nature? You are not Christians. If you hear much of fruit, and bear every summer different clusters, then you are a Christian. The trellis on which a vine is trained is not a vine. The vine is valuable because it bears grapes. If it does not bear grapes, then the trellis is just as good as the vine.

"Evangelical Alliance." We see it stated that the Executive Committee of the Evangelical Alliance has issued the programme of the "Fifth General Assembly of Evangelical Christians in all parts of the world," which is to be held at Amsterdam, Holland, from August 18 to August 23. The meeting, it assumes, will be of great importance. All the Protestant countries of the world will be represented by leading clergymen and laymen. The Assembly will discuss: I. Church and Theology; II. Christianity and Society; III. Christianity and Human Misery; and IV. Christianity and Heathenism. The first section will embrace reports about the state of Christianity in various countries; the one on the United States will be made by Prof. H. B. Smith of this city. The Rev. Mr. Spurgeon and Dr. Krummacker are mentioned among the distinguished preachers who are expected to take part in the religious services.

This meeting is called by the Radical Churchmen, the innovators, the eccentric pastors, such as Spurgeon and some people on this side of the water whom we might name. The object undoubtedly is to consult upon such a course to pursue in the future as shall increase the power of what must be termed this branch of religion. About the same date as that proposed for the Evangelical Alliance Congress, the Anglican Church has appointed a Council at Canterbury, England, under the superintendence of the Archbishop. From all parts of the world, prelates will flock to this assemblage, and the pomp of Protestantism will doubtless be displayed to its utmost as in imitation of the wonderful display so recently made by the Roman Catholics at St. Peter's. That the attempt will fail is evident. The same determined spirit, the same uniformity and unanimity, do not actuate the Protestant Church, as is proved by the fact that the great meetings of the Protestants claiming the same faith are to be held, and that these prominent Evangelical leaders do not all meet at the same place and under the same influence, mainly because of a question of forms. Of course the Catholics of Rome will be discussed at these Evangelical and Anglican Church meetings, and severe denunciations will be made against them; this has been the custom of the Protestant Church, and will so continue, we suppose. It is to be regretted that this is the case, as are finding fault with other Christian denominations, the Protestants should seek to reconcile those intestine troubles which mar the usefulness of their own Church. Why cannot they "let up" a little upon the Roman Catholics and thus give to the world a more consistent example of Christian charity? But let them imitate the zeal and determination of the Catholics, let them vie with the latter in the abundance of their good and charitable works, their boldly extended missions, their constantly evinced kindness to the poor. Initiating or rivaling the good in the Roman Catholic religion, and ignoring the bad, would be far the readiest method of combatting its advances; and not until Protestantism pursues such a course can it expect to command that respect and love which it at present jeopardizes by unseemly quarrels and schisms. Let the Protestant Church hold together and work together ere it set about to demolish any other form of religion. The masses are not edified by the differences which seem the normal condition of the Church and its influence must be impaired by them. The great power of the Roman Catholics is their concentration. To rival this power the Protestant must exhibit the same spirit and not give the world the spectacle of two opposing great meetings at the same date.—N. J. Express.
