(From the New York Hapress.) Extraordinary Forgery.

Commodore Vanderbilt's Signature Imiinted-Seventy-five Thousand Dollars Involved--Pursuit and Detection of the Forger--His Arrest Made through a Pen and Ink Sketch.

Detective W. G. Elder, of the Central Police Department, returned at a inte hour Friday night from an exten-sive tour through the West, having in his custody John Henry Livingston, alias Matthews, alias Depeyster, who stands charged with forging the name of Cor$75,000, and -obtaining the money for the same at the National City Bank of this city. The details of the case, as furnished to our report-ant Ma Elder, are of an unusually the horses until they arrived at Dyer,

The Bank officials at once communicated with Superintendent Kennedy, who detailed detective Elder to work the case up. The detective called on out of Mr. Worth, the paying teller, who world. arnished him with a remarkably accurate sketch of the man who had presented the check, drawn by him with a pen from memory. So correct was this likeness that Mr. Elder was enabled to trace the forger by its means. Mr. Elder then called on commodore Vanderbilt, who gave im a description of a man with whom he had been negotiating for the purchase of a valuable horse to match one in his possession.
