THE REPUBLICAN.

THURSDAY::::::::: December 5, 1867.

A Plea for Some Unfortunates.

In determining how best the Democracy shall use the fruits of their great victories, their peculiar position as a party must not be overlooked. It is the only great political organization which has survived the shock of the war. Of the parties in existence in 1860, it alone now lives. What was the Union party in 1860 afterwards became the Republican, and even that exists only in name, so changed are its sentiments. The Constitutional Union party, or Bell-Everett organization, with its good intentions, is extinct. Alone the rock of Democracy—

Lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale and midway breasts the storm.

The Democratic organization, preserved through years of darkness, doubt, and despair, by a few brave, bold souls, is, therefore, at present, the only refuge for those flying from the horrors of Radicalism. It is the sole, safe harbor and asylum for the many good men who start back appalled from the goal which Phillips, Stevens, and Greeley point out to them. By the fact, however, of its being the only existing opposition to Radicalism, its ultimate success, though no less inevitable, is in some measure retarded. It cannot be denied that many now remain within the Republican pale, merely because there is no other fold to receive them if they left than the Democracy. There is a large class of temperaments, of whom we wish to speak respectfully, who cannot stand strong food and bright lights of any kind. To such the Democratic party is at present distasteful. They recoil from Radicalism, but they can't dijest Democracy. They would willingly leave the former, but they are not hardy enough yet for the latter. So they stand trembling within the Republican lines, either not voting at all, or else hesitatingly and from the force of habit supporting a policy whose results they dare not look in the face. The Bell-Everett party was a congenial fold for this large class, for such we believe it to be. There they could air their conservatism, without bringing it in contact with the dreaded Democracy.

Its tint was neutral. It abhorred positive colors. It was neither for nor against slavery. The territorial question it preferred not to be aware of. Stabene was its motto. And its request to anxious enquirers—the race of "earnest men" had not in those days arisen—was, "do not tell us anything disagreeable." Its range was not very distinct or sharply defined, but it had generally the Constitution and the Union and the Flag, and all those conventionalities, and in it one could lie down and sleep and be happy, nor dread the rude alarms of its more pronounced antagonists. Of course the quivering, fitful light which this colorless flame gave forth was soon blown out by the fierce blasts of the war. Its component parts went according to their affinities. A few of the bravest came over to the Democracy, but a large mass fled shivering back, under cover of loyalty, to the Republicans. During the hot passions of the strife, all elements were sublimated into the patriotic gas. No precipitates of conservatism were permitted to form. Now the heat is dead or dying. Condensation is taking place, and all the little crystals of conservatism, of dread of Radicalism, and of humanity, are beginning to appear in the social crucible.

The furnace of war being out, there is no longer any power to keep together these diverse temperaments, and the Conservative element, which can only combine with Radicalism at a high temperature, is slowly but surely depositing itself. To drop the chemical metaphor, that portion of the Republican party which respects law, order, and the white race, is trying to get away from its uncongenial past without exactly knowing how best to do it. The duty, then, of the Democracy is a very plain one. While it adheres unflinchingly to every plank in its time-honored platform, it must respect this tenderness and these scruples, and assist them out of their dilemma. It must not frighten them off. A tone of fierte, which was proper enough not long ago, in repelling the insolent aggressions, would be much out of place now. A flippant causticity or contempt for those who have not yet mounted to the bracing atmosphere in which we breathe, will not attract them up to our altitude. We are thoroughly confidant that we are right, and it is impossible that we cannot make our position every day more approachable to these reluctant party-less but party-seeking souls. While we cannot descend to them, we certainly can smooth their path and remove obstacles from their track. Every day their own allies will develop to them such traits as will be more and more repulsive. In the meantime, we, without offending their pride of opinion, or rubbing up their prejudice, may, by judicious behavior and accommodation, educate them gradually out of their weaknesses, until finally they will come not only to eat, but to relish the olive of Democracy whilom so repugnant.—Age.

General McClellan has decided to remain in Europe for some months longer, and cannot, therefore, be expected at home this Fall, or Winter. The family of General Marcy returned to New York last week by the Scotia, having left General McClellan and family in London; the latter were expecting to go to the continent in a few days.

SCENE FOR A PICTURE.—The Radical leaders and Congressmen seated on a platform, placed on the heads of Southern darkeys, who are unwittingly approaching a mighty precipice, singing "Old John Brown." The Radicals seeing their danger, are writhing in agony, tearing their hair, and frantically appealing to Grant to save them, while the General quietly sits smoking his cigar.

BEAL'S
LATE POWEL'S EMBROCATION.
For all diseases incident to Horses, Cattle, and Human Flesh, requiring the use of an external application.

THIS new Compound, prepared by a practical Chemist, having a full knowledge of all the medical virtues of each ingredient that enters into its composition, is warranted to extract anything of the kind ever yet offered to the Public as an external application for the diseases for which it is recommended. We are satisfied that it will work its own road into the confidence of all who use it, and those who try it once will never be without it, and therefore we only ask experience as the best test of its usefulness. It is pronounced by Farriers, and all who have tried it, to be the best application ever used. This Embrocation has been put up for over eight years, and it is only through the increasing demand and urgent request of my friends and the Public that I send it forth as the great remedial agent for the various diseases to which that noble and useful animal, the horse, is subject.
Many remedies have been offered to the Public under different forms, some of these are injurious, others at best of little use, and many wholly improper to answer the purposes for which they are recommended.
A judicious and really useful composition, free from those objections, has therefore long been desired by many gentlemen who have valuable horses, and are unwilling to trust them in the care of designing and pretended Farriers. Their wishes are at length fully gratified, by (Dr. Beale) being prevailed upon to allow this valuable Embrocation (which has proved so efficacious to the various diseases) to be prepared and brought out to the public.
This Embrocation was extensively used by the Government during the war.
For sale by Hartswick & Irwin, Clearfield. Joseph R. Irwin, Curwensville. Daniel Weilander, Lutheresburg.
