BEAUTIFUL AND TRUE.-In an article in Frazer's Magazine this beautiful but brief extract occurs : "Education does not commence with the alhabet. It begins with a mother's ok-with a father's smile of approbation or sign of reproof-with a sister's gentle pressure of the band, or a brother's noble act of forbearance with bird's nests admired and not tonched—with creening ants and al. office with J. B. ON THE SAFE SIDE .- A lady in New York, wanting to engage a coachman put an advertisement in the paper teling those who would like the place to call at her house. At the proper time she found half a dozen men waiting to see her. How was she to decide which of them would make the best conchman? She had a plan of her own. Turning to them, one by one she asked: How near to the edge of a steep precipice can you drive my carriage with safety? One of them said he would venture within a floot, another. foot : another within eight inches ; another four inches; but the last one answered better; "In truth, madam, I'd keep as far off as ever I could. This was the man that she wanted to find, and she engaged him at once. My young friend, how near can you safely come to doing wrong? Will it not be better to keep as far off as you possibly can?

Right thinking is unquestionably the right road to right living. Comprehensively viewed, men are as their beliefs are. With many exceptions and limitations, the general truth is to Nevertheless, right be excepted, thinking is fundamental. It is as valuable as truth; and anything that invalidates the correctness of belief, directly or indirectly, invalidates truth itself, which is the foundation of human affairs and is the very path along which men are to walk. Not that I think right living and right thinking are poor things, but they show that the church has not yet got up the highest things in Christ's life. The ideal of life is having the thought right, living right, "I love the world though it is my enemy," unto sufferthinking and death, the power of right thinking and right living disclosing of the Charled House, Charled, Penn's.

THE RELIGION OF THE DAY .- A COtemporary, the Episcopalian, has a low opinion of the half-hearted religion which is so popular with many in our day, requiring little self-denial or seqarition from the world. These words earnest and worthy of being heeded :

The religion of the day is an easy minded reigion, without conflict and wrestling, without self-denial and sacriffee; a religion which knows noth- DRUGS.
