

RELIGIOUS MISCELLANY.

However early in the morning you seek the gate of access, you find it already open; and however deep the midnight moment when you find yourself in the sudden arms of death, the winged prayer can bring an instant Saviour near; and this wherever you are. It needs not that you ascend a special Pinnacle or Moriah. It needs not that you should enter some awful shrine, or put off your shoes on some holy ground. Could a moment be rescued from every spot from which an acceptable prayer had passed away, and on which a prompt answer has come down, in the same town with the Register in Backusport, at Girard, Erie Co., Pa. I am prepared to take charge of such in Backusport, Charge moderate. [Oct 21, '87]

SECRET FAULTS.—"Cleanse thou me from secret faults."—This may mean not so much faults concealed from others as those which are hidden from ourselves. Do you think this impossible?

Long ago a friend of mine made the startling suggestion that men are usually ignorant of their greatest faults. Said my friend, "I did not make the discovery myself, but it was suggested by a gentleman of much experience in life and in the world. It set me to thinking, and what I at first denied, I afterwards concluded must be true.

In the first place, if we really saw a thing to be our greatest fault, if we had any true desire for improvement, the first impulse would be to correct that fault, and then it would cease to be the greatest. For our own sakes we do not go willfully indulging what we know to be a fault or a blemish in our character, and one which others must recognize; our desire to stand well in their esteem is too strong for that.

Then we may mistake in our estimate of our own characters, and so remain ignorant. For instance, what others regard as obstinacy may appear to us but proper firmness, or perhaps fixed principles. Men do not always know themselves.

I have seen an avaricious man who called himself and who really thought he was liberal and benevolent. He had generous impulses and was always going to do something at some future time. The only trouble was that he had so many schemes for gain, so many present uses for his money, that his generous plans were always in the future and receding. He loved benevolence but he loved gain better. Nothing could have surprised him more than to be told he was not a liberal man. He was and is ignorant of his greatest fault.

I know a woman who is uncharitable and severe; she speaks out just what she thinks, and so says a great many hard things. Yet she does not mean to be harsh and hard; she considers it only commendable frankness, and would be surprised and led to an indignant denial, if she were told that she disregarded the law of love. She does not mean to do so; but her kindness in her heart, but her severe judgment is stronger than love.

I know a person who is thoroughly selfish, and yet is exceedingly kind to his own family or friends, and he thinks he does a great deal for others. But, indeed, he never pushes himself out of his way, and what he does, is done for those who are his own his second self. He would be astonished if you would accuse him of selfishness. Said my friend, "Tell me your greatest fault, and see if I do not know it." "No, you would not believe it, and would only be disturbed; you could gain nothing, and I should not stand as well with you."

That is a hard case, if we are not only ignorant of our faults, but will not bear to be told them. Then the help lies in this: There is One who "searcheth the heart." If we truly desire to be better, let us search and try our ways and turn unto the Lord. Let us honestly pray, "Cleanse Thou us from secret faults."

I have seen a lark rising from his bed of grass and soaring upwards, singing as he rises, and in hopes to get to heaven and climb above the clouds; but the poor bird was beaten back with the loud singing of an eastern wind, and his motion made irregular and inconstant, descended more at every breath of the tempest than all the vibrations of his wings served to exalt him, till the little creature was forced to sit down and part, and stay till the storm was overpast; and then it made a prosperous flight; for then it did rise and sing, as if it had learned music and motion from some angel as he passed some through the air. So is the prayer of the good man when agitated by any passion. He fails would speak to God, and his words are as of this earth, earthly; he would look to his Maker, but he could not help seeing also that which distracted him, and a tempest was raised and the man overruled; his prayer was broken, and his thoughts were troubled, and his words ascended to the clouds, and the wandering of his imagination recalled them, and in all the fluctuating varieties of passion they are never like to reach God at all. But he sits him down and sighs over his infirmity, and fixes his thoughts upon things above, and forgets all little vain passages of this life, and his spirit is hallowed, and his soul is exalted, and he then softly and sweetly ascends to heaven on the wings of the Holy Dove, and dwells with God, till it returns, like the useful bee, loaded with a blessing and the dew of heaven. Imbute the lark, if the winds beat you back rest awhile and try again.

BEAL'S LATE POWELL'S EMBROCATION. For all diseases incident to Throat, Croup, and Human Flesh, requiring the use of an external application.

THIS new Compound prepared by a practical Chemist, having a full knowledge of all the medicinal virtues of each ingredient that enters into its composition, is warranted to exceed any of the kind ever put forth to the public as an external application for the diseases for which it is recommended. We are satisfied that it will work its own road into the confidence of all who use it, and those who try it once will never be without it, and therefore we rely on experience as the best test of its usefulness. It is pronounced by Farriers, and all who have tried it, to be the best application ever used. This Embrocation has been put out for over 17 years, and it is only through the increasing demand and urgent request of my friends and the Public that I send it forth as the grand remedial agent for the various diseases to which that noble and useful animal, the horse, is subject. Many remedies have been offered to the Public under different names, some of these are injurious, others at best of little use, and many wholly improper to use for the purposes for which they are recommended.

A judicious and really useful composition, free from those objections, has therefore long been desired by many gentlemen who have valued the care of designing and pretending Farriers. Their wishes are at length fully gratified, by (Dr. Beal's) being prevailed upon to allow this valuable Embrocation to be prepared and sold to the various diseases to be prepared and brought out to the public.

This Embrocation was extensively used by the Government during the war, and was highly praised by Hartwick & Lewis, Clearfield, Joseph B. Lewis, Curwensville, Daniel Goodlander, Luthersburg.
