THRILLING VERSES.

[The eleconstances which induced the writing of the following tenebing and thrilling lines are as fathows: A poung lady of New York was in the habit of writing for the Philadelphia Ledger on the subject of Temperature. Her writing was so full of pathon, an evinced ruth deep amotion of soul that a friend of here accoused her or being a maning on the subject of Temperature—whereupon she wrote the following lines: j

Go feel what I have felt, Go bear what I have borne-Sink 'neath a blow a father deaft,
And the sold world's proud scarn.
Then suffer on from year to year—
Thy sole relief the scorebing tear.

Go kneed as I have knelt, Implore, between and pray— trive the besofted heart to melt, The downward course to stay, a dashed with hitter curse aside, Your prayers barlesqued, your tears defied,

Go weep as I have wept,
O'er a loved father's full—
See every promised blessing swept—
Youth's sweetness turned to gali—
Life's fading flowers strewed all the way—
That brought me up to woman's day.

Go see what I have seen,

Behold the strong man bowed—
With grashing teeth—lips bathed in blood—
And cold and livid brew;
Go catch his withered glance and see
There mirror'd his soul's misery.

Go to thy mother's side,
And her grashed bosom sheer;
Thise own deep anguish hide;
Wipe from her sheeks the bitter tear.
Aark her worn frame and witherd brow—
The grey that streaks her dark hair new—
With fading frame and trembling limb;
And trace the ruin back to him
Whose plighted faith, in early youth,
Promised sternal leve and truth.
But who, forsworn, hath yielded up
That promise to the curved cup;
And led har down through love and light,
And all that our prospect bright;
And chained her there, mid want and strife
That lowly thing, a drunkard's wife—
And stamp'd on childhood's brow so mild,
That withering blight, the drunkard's child t
Go hear, and feel, and see, and know.

Go hear, and feel, and see, and know,
All that my seed buth felt and known,
Then look upon the wine cup's glow,
See if its beauty our atone—
Think if its flavor you will try
When all proclaim ' 'tis drink and die!'

Tell me I mays the bowl—

Hate is a feeble word,
I footh—annon—my very soul
With strong disques is stier'd,
When I see, or hear, or tell,
Of the dark nevanage or serie!

Growing Old.

We perused an article in one of our exchanges the other day under the above caption, in which the writhat sets upon the mile-stone of the years behind us, and brings us nearer to the silent close of our journey. To us the thought suggested a differ-ent train of reflection. We do not feel that it is a sad thing to grow old.

As we go forward and meet the years each is a messenger that tells us a pleasant story of the land to which we have taken up our pillrimage, and though we may not lay hands upon them and detain them, yet they imbue us with very happy thoughts and pleasant memories, and clothe each coming messenger in a halo-like garment of smiles and beauty. The journey of life is but short, but it is long enough to teach us the idleness and littleness of things earthly, and that our earthly tabernacle is far too narrow to hold in thrall that invisible fire of immortality that pulses through our being, or even permit it to shine forth in that brilliancy that it so much longs for.

Life is beautiful, but it is only beautiful as a panorama that moves on to the great and final climax, when the curtains of eternity are drawn, and the marvelous beauty of the universe opens with its endless vistas of glory upon our enlarged sight, and glory upon our enlarged sight, and then dreams of the past are veiled from view in place of the never ending present. The boy, the sword, and the toy make up the sum of our existence, for the young and the old are nearest heaven. Pratting child. existence, for the young and the old are nearest heaven. Prattling child hood and silver age walk hand in hand, and laugh at the gamboling lambs and make pretty speeches to the bright butterflies, for the value of the bright butterflies. Time is but a mist to the right and dle of the grave.

It is only when we are among the tropical clouds of the middle passage of life that we utterly forget the embedding of innocence and turn the edge that we utterly forget the embedding of innocence and turn the edge that the office I will hold myrelf personally responsitive of the office I will hold myrelf personally of the sword against the unwarring armies of beauty, and this we do out of very blindness, for when we pass the mountain summit and go down the gentle plain toward the gold and the gentle plain toward the gold and the gentle plain toward the gold and t amelyst pillars of the sunset, we cant by letter a few days before the patient designs amelyst pillars of the sunset, we cant by letter a few days before the patient designs amelyst pillars of the sunset, forth, coming. for the flowers that wave and beckon us onward.

There is nothing more touching and beautiful than age. The bent form, the feeble, tottering step, the diamond eye, and the childlike confidence of the aged speak to every heart, not dead to every human emotion, with a wonderful power and pathos. We do not envy the feelings of that person who can say a slighting word to or of the aged of every condition of life, and whose strong hand is not held out to them. out to them at every rough corner and every narrow crossing. Not ma-ny days since we saw a bright and beautiful girl, having almost the form and semblance of an angel, rudely jostle a poor, decrepid old dame on the sidewalk, and tell her in tones of petalence to keep out of her way. The girl's bright eyes will yet be dim and lusterless, and her fair round shoulders bent with the weight of years and the burdens of life, and it her life's sunset is cold and obscured with clouds it will be the burdens of life. with clouds, it will be because she herself, in the bloom of youth, poisoned the chalice with a snieldal hand. Of all to be loved and cherished, and kindly cared for, the aged are first deserving, for they have borne their share of the burdens, and their patient eyes are only waiting to see the gates lifted up when they will be closed in an ectasy of love. We grow old, but only that we may rehabilitate our selves with the garments of an endless youth.

Be not astonished when you men of virtue in disgrace, and dignities worn by those who have no right to them Open your eyes, and consider the innumerable stars, which never tose anything of their brightness; but the heavens turn, and now the moon, now the sun is colipsed.

From Rev. Joseph D. Kennard. D. D., Pasic of the Tenth Baptist Church, Philadelphia. Dr. Jackson.— Dear Sir: I have been frequestly requested to connect my name with recommendations of different kinds of medicines, but regarding the pane—tice as out of my signopriate sphere. I have hear in all cases delined; but with a clear proof in various inexances, and particularly in my own family, of the unefulness of Dr. Hechand's German hitters. I depart for once from my usual course, to repress my full conviction that for general debility of the system, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. It some cases it may fall, but usually, I fount set, it will be very beneficied to those who suffer from the abovoccause. Yours, very respectfully.

It is a well established fact that fully co-half of the female po-lice are seldom in the health, or to me thier own expression, by "never feel well." They are languid, devoid of all energy, extremely nervous, and have no ap-petite. To this class of persons the Bitters, or the Tonio, is especially recommended.

Hon. James Thompson, Judge of the Suprems Court of Pennsylvania, writes. "Philadelphia, April 28, 1862. "I consider Hoodland's Herman Bitters a valuable medicine in case of Indigestion or Dyspesia. I can certify this from experience. "Yours with respect."
