She says:
I for one do not believe Mrs. Sickles
OIL, PAINT, PUTTY, GLASS, guilty of the charge made against ber. I believe Sickles to have been as vile in his treatment of his wife as he was in every other respect; perhaps more vile, because he could wrong her with impunity, and sweep from the earth, covered with odium, a man whose graces created envy in his own mind, and whose manly sense of honor was a reproach to his own vileness, and whose intellect and culture were far beyond his own reach, and whose only sin was in his sympathy for and kindness to a neglected, ill-used wife. I admit that it is dangerous ground, this sympathy for a married woman, Sizes, for sale by who had better be content to suffer, endure and die than touch the tempt ing cup. Let this suffice on this head. That Mrs. Sickles was levely in person, simple and childlike in characters are not easily degraded. Were she the degraded creature he has led the world to believe, her sensibilities would not have remained so acute that she died in less than two hours of a broken heart. She was weak and cowardly, I

Let me depict the few last years in the life of this injured woman.

Stung, it may be, by an irresistible feeling of remorse, he pretends in the eyes of the world to have restored her to favor. I will not discuss the propriety of this kind of klopstock sentiment. I speak of the fact. She was placed in a handsome house, SAWS! SAWS! SAWS!

with the ordinary appliances of wealth Of the secret history of the two at this time nothing need be said. She was ruined in character, broken in bealth, utterly lost to the world as only women can be lost—left without hope, without society, and without sympathy, except from those who were related to her, and who loved and pitied her. She had long intervals of nervous prostration, when she would for hours act like a dying person. She sat day after day, head leaning upon her wasted hand, and emerson's Patent Adjustable Swage, eyes listless, seeing and caring for for Spreading. Sharpening, and Sharping the little in a world whose sunshine to her tech of all Splitting Saws. had been so darkly celipsed. She sighed faintly, but said little or nothing. She was a sad wreck. She knew she was dying, and expressed no thought or interest in anything but her absent daughter.

One day she turned suddenly to a young friend and asked: "Do you think me a guilty woman?" and without waiting for an answer she went on, "I wish to speak now while I can. I was so shocked and terrified at that borellab time and the speak of the speak at that borrible time that I did not know what I said. But I am not guilty of any sin. Mr. Sickles was very violent-I was afraid of himhe brought me a paper, which he said I must sign—he said he should be bung if I did not sign it. I never read one word of that paper; I did not know one word written in it. I put my name where he told me, and

Mr. George Peabody. The life of this noble man seems to be drawing to an end, and his last acts are characterized not only by charity, but by great wisdom. With-out wife or children—his relatives well provided for-he has chosen to dispose of the rest of his great fortune in his life time, when he can see the grateful hands that receive it, rather ** hib than wait until death denies him the pleasure of giving. After having expended $3,000,000 for the cause of education in the war-stricken South, and made numerous other benificent donations, both North and South, he donations, both North and South, he last week endowed a Professorship in General Lee's College with a handsome sum of $60,000. He has determined to aid so liberally the Institution which George Washington founded, and over which the greatest living Virginian, (American I) now presides. We are hearmend of words to each We are beggared of words to speak Mr. Peabody's praises. Orators and poets try in vain, for they cannot come up to the fulness of the people's gratitude. CERTIFICATE.

We, the the undersigned having witnessed the trial of T. J. Boath's Improved Stomp Extractor on the farm of R. H. Moore, near Lathersburg, on Saturday and Monday, the 7th and 9th of November, take pleasure in saying to the politic, that we believe it to be the best machine new in use for extracting stumps. It is of simple construction, early managed, not liable to get out of order, and very durable. Four men neal the machine from the wagon, where entirely spart, put it together, and pulled a large pine stomp in less than one hour. We saw two men pull a large stump with coas. They use a horse, but he does his much in taking out the largest stumps, without a hard pull. Mr. Booth, the Patentee, fully understands putting up and handling the machine. We would advice those in want of stump satraction to see this one tested before purchasing claushers, which they can do free of charge by calling on the Proprietors. J. C. Barrett, J. W. Bickard, R. How to Save Money. HR times are bard; you'd like to know How you may cave your dollars; The way to do it I will show, If you will read what follows. A man who lived not far from here,

Who worked hard at his trade, But had a household to support That squandered all he made. I met him once. Bays he, "My frland, I look thread bear and rough; I've tried to get myself a puit, But can't sure up enough." Says I, my friend, how much have you?

I'll tell you where to go To get a seit that's mund and cheap; To BEIZENSTEIN & Go. He took what little he had saved, And went to Retreastein & Brothers', And there he got a hundrome ruit, For half he paid to others.

New he is home, he looks so well, And their effect is such, That when they take their daily meal, Thay don't out half as much. And now he finds on Saturday night, With all their wants appoined. That he has money left to spend, And some to lay aside.

His good success, with cheerful smile, He gladly tells to all, If you'd save money, go and key Your cluthes at-REIZENSTEIN'S CLOTHING HALL. Where the chespest fixest and best Clothing and good Fornishing Goods can be had to suit overy tasts and in every style april, 67
