Propare to pare did Winter's may, When Autumn in a reverie host,
The mellow day time dreams away:
When Summer coines in inneing mind,
I'm gam once more on hill and dell,
To mark his many shares they fond,
And see if all are ripened well.

With baltary breath she whitpers less,
The dring flowers book up and gire.
Thele smatted lineause are they go,
For her who made their beauties live.
She enters 'muth the woodbast's shade,
Her suphyrs life the lingering load,
And bears it, goally where are this
The loved and but ones of its grief.

At last old Autumn, rising, takes Again his septre and his throne, With heisterous hand the tree he winkes, Intent on gathering all his own.

Sweet Summer, sighing, this the plain, And, walting Winter, grant and grim, Sees miser Autumn heard his grain, And smiles to think it's all for him.

Beaumet, as I afterwards recollected, showed extraordinary alacrity in closing my desk, arranging my pa-pers, and offering my hat and cane, which I attributed to the need of incessant activity with which he appeared overwhelmed ever since our forced departure. We threaded the well-peopled streets and reached the battery. He had offered me his arm, and hurried on as if he were in haste to reach it. When we were on the grand esplanade he hastened still more until we reached the edge. He spoke loudly and rapidly, and admired, in energetic terms, the beauties of the scene. Saddenly he stopped in the midst of his disordered conversation. I had disengaged my arm from him. I fixed my eye upon him, and he mov-ed, aside as if intimidated and ashamed: " Beaumet " cried I, 'your intention is to kill me; you mean to throw me from this height into the sea! De-
