The boy stond on the burning deck, And smoked his pipe of clay, And bet his money on a hob-tailed mag, When the moon had gone away.

I'm isnely since my mother dial— The ise is round her still— So I'll peel a bag of taters, O. With the except of Banker Hill.

It is the bour when from the boughs I kissed my Multy Aun, Spram, Elijah, and herry up Pomp-Yes, or any other man. Oh, what are the wild waves saying?
I cried the long night through;
And a voice replied, far up the height,
A little more cider, too.

The harp at nature's advent strong, Is coming through the rye! Then kies me quick and go, my honey, Said the spider to the fly.

My Willie's on the dark blue sea, With five hundred thousand more And my days are gliding swiftly by To the old Kentucky shere.

The following verse, which we accidentally picked up the other day, contains all the letters in the English alphabet, except e, a, a. Now it is a question whether any other rhyme can be produced (in print) without the letter "E," which is a letter more community used than any other: A juvial swain may rack his brain,
And tax his fancy's might;
That what I say is right.

There are only 20,000 land owners in England. In 1860 the entire land tax was £1,750,000—the rental being £66,000,000. It is not strange that the English masses should seek to break down such a system. Five noblemen own one fourth of Scotland.
