

CLEARFIELD, PA.
WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 12, 1894.
ONE SUMMER DAY.

BY STEVE PARK.

We had found a pleasant path,
Leading out into the wood,
Where the oaks like mighty warriors
To their giant beauty stood.
Where the golden sunbeams
Flooded down in waves of gold,
Lighting up the leafy forest,
Like a picture quaint and old.

And we followed all the while
Of that foot path, with the trees,
While the summer winds were singing,
And the rustling leaves were sighing.
Still it seemed to us the magic
Of some great enchanted land,
Must have been the hand of some
Of some great enchanted land.

I can see the brilliant splendor
Of that glowing summer day,
As it comes to life again,
Where the dainty flowers lay,
I can hear the music drifting
Very softly into the trees,
But my heart is beating and
Deeper, brighter than these.

I remember that you gathered
Oaks, leaves and blossoms rare,
And we were a wreath between us,
Which you placed upon my hair,
Saying words whose earnest meaning
I had never caught before,
"I love you so fondly, darling,
May I love you evermore?"

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

This is Ludo Taylor in all of his dreamy moods, when the keener arrows of thought are returned to the quiver, and the bow of the mind is unstrung for a brief season of rest.

The moments, hours, days of a week, have been gathered into a sheaf by the harvest hands of Time, and to-night they will be bound up and stored in the granary of the past. Fifty-two sheaves like this, will sow the field of a year from the field of Life.

Well be it for us, in sowing the moments that grow into weeks, we have selected ground in the vineyard, and tended with careful hands, the budding and growing of these precious plants, that the harvest may be a golden one for the Great Reaper, who waits for the appointed time.

Will it be to-night, or to-morrow, that the sound of the sickle may be heard?

The hours have come and gone, and the gentle tide of sleep begins to flow upon the city, and ere long, the grateful "to-morrow" will rest upon the slumbers who have a place to lay their heads.

Could we look up to the great multitude of God's family in this act, what a picture would rise before us; the curly head of youth just touching the silver locks of age; the rosy cheeks of infancy pillowed on the breast of maternity; the hard face of Want resting on the calloused hand of Toil; the head of the rich reposing on down; the head of the poor and homeless, with not even a stone to offer for a couch. And this is the world of Saturday night.

While the hours are wearing away, the thoughts and fancies of years are gathering, and passing like a panorama before our vision; and the shadowy forms of bygone scenes crowd upon the canvas, and fill our Sanctum with imagery, and our hearts with strange emotions.

From without, come in imagination, the moans and cries of suffering, that swell up to Heaven on every side; and while we sit under the gas light, our hearts go out into the great world—to all who live in the shade of life, and we pray God speed the time when they may come out into the sunny path.

Who of God's creatures are on the best side of life this Saturday night?

Few who started in the great race, filled with hope and youth, in the green spring time of boyhood, have come thus far unscathed. Pitfalls of temptation have been set for their feet, and they fell; snares have been set for them, and they became converts to error; but still the race goes on. And here we are on the troubled stream of life, drifting between the "Today" and "Yesterday," while before us—the only reality we can grasp stands the Present just ready to drop into the Past.

Without, all is hushed save the gentle rustling of the wind, that brings the summer in its trailing robes; or the lonely footfalls, sounding on the pavements below.

Silence in the streets that yesterday gave such tokens of life. Silence in the darkened dwelling, with only here and there a dimly burning lamp to guide the prodigal to his home. Silence in the newspaper office, where the Saturday night is sinking down into the Sabbath on weary hands and heads. Silence for the pen—silence for the clicking types, and the dim of machinery. Silence in the hearts of those who sleep, to dream, perchance of shining rivers and singing birds—Silence in the chamber, where the mysterious messenger is passing the guard of prayerful friends and watchers, to lay his icy hands upon the form of some loved one. Silence in the shops and stores, where the week-day traffic has been carried on. Silence in the churches until the Sabbath morn wakes the bells and calls to prayer the weary laden. Silence along the busy walks of daily life—Silence on fields, and hill and wooded ridge. Silence on the dark river, that glides beneath its icy cover to the sea.

Silence in the resting place of those who have been called from among us and now lie where the cold dews gather on stone and shrubs. Silence everywhere—and as we look from our window out into the night, God's jewels—the stars—are silently shining down; and the same law that holds them in the blue above, teaches us that the Great Ruler of the Universe cares for all His children this Saturday Night.

THE "GOVERNMENT" STOMACH.

The "truly full" heart has been subjected to a number of extra palpitations, recently, because the stomach of "the government" was suffering the usual effects of having been over-stretched. The berries were probably presented by some one aspiring to the position of gardener to "the government." The amount consumed by "the government"—at one sitting—is supposed to have been a few berries short of four quarts. So small a quantity should not have interfered with the working capacity of the stomach of the best government the sun ever knew. Having previously taken an over-gorge of negro berries would not mix with a sufficient degree of assimilation to enable the ducts of "the government's" provender receptacle to perform with its accustomed mysteriousness. MORAL: Present "the government" with any thing but strawberries.

J. G. Lemoine, who was convicted about a year ago of robbing the County National Bank of Clearfield, Pa., has sent a statement to St. Louis purporting to be a confession that he and two other parties blow open the safe of the Sheriff of Franklin county, Missouri, in March, 1890, and robbed it of eleven thousand dollars. Such a robbery was committed at that time, and Lemoine was arrested for the crime, but acquitted. One of the parties implicated by Lemoine is Col. David Murphy, a highly respectable citizen of Washington, Franklin county, and editor of a newspaper published there. Murphy is also well known in St. Louis, and although Lemoine's statement is sworn to and witnessed by the Warden of the Penitentiary at Allegheny City, it will receive but little credence where Murphy is known.—Exchange.

A DARING LAD.—A five year old son of Mr. John Westbrook of this borough, performed a feat of daring on Wednesday last that but few boys of his age would dare to do. The little fellow, unobserved and unassisted by any one, climbed up the attic stairs to the trap door, opened it, and ventured upon the roof, which is very sloping. Unconscious of his peril he amused himself in climbing over the roof, even going as far as the eaves, and looking upon the pavement below. A passer by happened to see him, when he climbed back again, and appeared to enjoy the romance more than the spectators.—Huntingdon Globe.

FORNEY'S WHITMORE.—Forney's Press is particularly severe in its condemnation of the reelection of Mr. Whitmore, the disgraced cadet, seller, and expresses a strong hope that Congress will decide adversely to his favorable reception. We cannot account for the position taken by the Press. Between Forney and Whitmore, notwithstanding his crimes, to be the dearest man of the two.—Whitmore never entered the grave yard and dug up, ghoul like, the bones of the man who took him from obscurity and educated and raised him to office of trust and profit.—Mifflintown Register.

RATHER FAST RIDING.—One hundred and thirty-two miles in three hours is pretty fast traveling, equaling one mile in one minute and twenty seconds for the entire distance.—This run was made with the Pacific Express, between this place and Harrisburg, on Saturday morning last.

On Tuesday morning, the same train made the run from this place to Harrisburg in two hours and fifty-eight minutes, and from Harrisburg to Philadelphia in two hours and twenty minutes, making the whole distance, 238 miles, in five hours and eighteen minutes.—Altoona Tribune.

DETENT'S BRIDGES.—The elephant "Tippoo Sahib," on exhibition at this place, on Monday last, appears to have a great aversion to crossing bridges. In coming here, he would not trust the bridge at Northumberland. He placed one foot upon it, then shook his head and wheeled around. He was then taken to a landing at the river where he swam across both bridges. In leaving this place, on Tuesday morning, he swam the river opposite Market street, his keeper accompanying him in a boat. The distance is about three-fourths of a mile.—Sunbury American.

The Perry county Democrat says: "On Sunday morning, 22d of May, the wife of Mr. Samuel McConnell, of To-boys township, this county, gave birth to a child without eyes. Our informant, a gentleman of veracity, says that there is not even the resemblance of an eye in the place where the eyes ought to be. Otherwise the child—a boy—is perfectly formed, stout and healthy. It is a wonderful freak of nature."

General Banks is being abused by all the servile organs of Guss. Grant for his allusion to the Cuba message of the latter. But that fact will not take from the force of the current which General Banks has set running against the present national administration. General Grant and his friends and defenders must face his own record, and on that he will be condemned by an aroused national and patriotic sentiment.

Mr. Morrell, Radical, who represents the Seventeenth Congressional district in this State, has purchased one third interest in the Bessemer steel rail, for Railroads, and is now using his position in Congress to get a high tariff put upon all imported rails. This is what the Radicals call representing the "dear" people.
