

THE REPUBLICAN.

CLEARFIELD, PA.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOV. 16, 1858.

THREE OLD SAWS.

If the world seems cold to you,
It's because it's too hot;
Let them cool it down a while,
Winter's that defines it.
Haste as foam to your own
To that endless gulf;
You will soon forget its noise,
And the world's a better place.

If the world's a wilderness,
Go back home & sit;
Will it help ease hardness
Or the world to sit?
Put a hot, heavy weight
On your shoulder, another
And to rest and wait in life;
Some forever brooks.

If the world's a vale of tears,
Smile till robins span it;
Breathes the forest like life,
A clear fresh stream in it;
Of all the world's a pleasure
Unto me that abides.
Show them how dark sorrow's stream
Runs with bright, bright tears.

A Western paper says: "Wanted at this office, an editor who can please everybody. Also a foreman who can so arrange the papers as to allow every man's advertisement to head the column."

A woman went to a circus in Terre Haute, Ind., accompanied by eleven children, and when a neighbor asked where the old man was, she said he was at home taking care of the children. Another neighbor called at the house, and seeing the old man trying to amuse nine young ones, asked where the old lady was. He said he had let her go to the circus with the children.

A CAPITAL JOKE.—And all the more palatable because it is true, and can be vouched for, took place a few Sundays since, at one of the Fourth street churches. It seems that a worthy deacon had been very industrious in selling a new church book, costing seventy-five cents. At the service in question the minister just before dismissing the congregation, rose and said, "All you who have children to baptize will please present them next Sabbath." The deacon, who by the way was a little deaf, and having an eye to selling the books, and supposing his pastor was referring to them, immediately jumped up and shouted: "And all you who haven't any, can get as many as you want by calling on me, at seventy-five cents each."

The preacher looked cross-eyed at the brothers, brothers looked at the clergyman; the audience punched the audience in the side, the bubble grew larger until it burst in a loud guffaw; ladies colored up, crimsoned, blushed and thanked the Lord for the low price of peopling the earth. There was no benediction that morning worth speaking of.

The deacon, after he had found out his mistake, changed his paw from the front of the church to the third from the rear; and though he cannot hear the sermon he is consoled with the thought that the young ladies can't snicker at him.—N. J. Patriot.

General Lee.

The announcement that General R. E. Lee has been struck down by paralysis, and not expected to recover, will be received, even at this crisis, with universal interest, and will everywhere excite a sympathy and regret which testify to the deep impression made on the world at large by his character and achievements. Few are the generals who have earned, since history began, a greater military reputation; still fewer are the men of similar eminence, civil or military, whose personal qualities would bear comparison with his. The bitterest enemies of his country hardly dared to whisper a word against the character of her most distinguished general, while neutrals regarded him with an admiration for his deeds and a respect for his lofty and unselfish nature which almost grew into veneration, and his own countrymen learned to look up to him with as much confidence and esteem as they felt for Washington, and with an affection which the cold demeanor and austere temper of Washington could never inspire. The death of such a man, even at a moment so exciting as the present, when all thoughts are absorbed by a nearer and present conflict, would be felt as a misfortune by all who still retain any recollection of the interest with which they followed the Virginia campaigns, and by thousands who have almost forgotten the names of Fredricksburg and Chancellorsville, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania. True greatness, like nature, a spirit more unselfish, a character purer, more chivalrous, the world has rarely, if ever, known. Of stainless life and deep religious feeling, yet free from all taint of cant and fanaticism, and as dear and congenial to the Cavalier Stuart as the Puritan Stonewall Jackson; unambitious, but ready to sacrifice all at the call of duty; devoted to his cause, yet never moved by his feelings beyond the line prescribed by his judgement; never provoked by just resentment to punish wanton cruelty by reprisals which would have given a character of needless savagery to the war—both North and South owe a deep debt of gratitude to him, and the time will come when both will be equally proud of him. And well they may, for his character and his life afford a complete answer to the reproaches commonly cast on money-grabbing, mechanical America. A country which has given birth to men like him, and those who followed him, may look the chivalry of Europe in the face without shame; for the fathe-lands of Sidney and of Bayard never produced a nobler soldier, gentleman, and Christian than General Robert E. Lee.

TERIBBLE ACCIDENT.—Col. Joseph Morrison, recently proprietor of the Morrison House, in Huntingdon, met with a terrible accident at that place on Monday evening last. He was on the bumper of a freight car, at the coal wharf, from which he fell to the track, when the train passed over his right arm, cutting and mangling it to such an extent that amputation was necessary. His recovery is considered doubtful.

The Cincinnati Enginer figures that as many as twenty thousand votes were cast by negroes in Ohio at the late election. As the Radical majority over the Democrats was 16,000, this shows that among the white voters of Ohio, there is a Democratic majority of about six thousand. The Radicals owed their success entirely to their now negro allies.

The Democratic majority on the Congressional vote in Indiana is 5,048 and yet the Radicals elect six of the eleven Congressmen. If the State was properly distributed, the Radicals could not elect more than two members of Congress.

General Low, Wallace, a military hawking and political empiric, was terribly routed at the recent election in Indiana, by that true and gallant soldier, General Malton D. Mason, who was his democratic opponent for Congress.

The darkness of Dayton, Ohio, has screened Schenck. It is well. The white man who would be caught doing such a thing deserves kicking. Schenck has come as near being a nigger as it is possible for a white man to do.

A railroad train ran into a horse and buggy near Huntingdon the other night. The horse was killed, and the buggy was picked up in pieces next morning. The occupants of the buggy, two in number, escaped unhurt.

Rev. Dr. Lamian, the assistant agent in the New York Methodist Book Concern has been suspended by the Book Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church till the charges against him can be investigated.

How to Save Money.

THESE times are hard; you'd like to know how you may save your dollars;

If the way to do it I will show;

You will read what follows.

A man who lived not far from here, who worked hard at his trade, but had a household to support. That squandered all he made.

I need not say, he says, "My friend, I look tried but not enough."

He took what little he had saved, and went to Hirschman & Brothers', and got his handsomest suit.

He had a friend, who had a good business, but half his time was spent in getting up a suit.

But can't save up enough.

Says I, friend, how much have you?

I'll tell you where to go.

To get a suit that's sound and sheep:

Z. REISENSTEIN & CO.

He took what little he had saved,

and went to Hirschman & Brothers', and got his handsomest suit.

He had a friend, who had a good business, but half his time was spent in getting up a suit.

But can't save up enough.

Now he is home, he looks as well,

And their effect is much.

That when they take their daily meal, they don't eat half as much.

And now he finds on Saturday night,

With all their wants supplied,

That he has money left to spend,

And some to lay aside.

His good success, with cheerful smile,

He always tells to all,

Your clothes always.
