The Pacific Railroad Swindle.

Mr. Bootwell, who now holds the keys of the National treasury, is an oily gentieman as fall of easurably and restality as the traditional egg is full of animal aliment, and as great an adopt in deception as was ever indice ed on the country by a New England commonwealth. He has managed to secure a good deal of puffery for the setivity (?) he displayed in trying to provent the Pacific railroad from swindling the government out of many millions of dollars. Now it turns out that Boutwell kept his peace until the damage was irreparable, and then NEW SERIES--VOL. 12, NO. 3. sent up a hae and cry which was meant to cover up his share of the in-

The history of the whole uffair is now made public, and these are the simple facts, without anything having been extenuated, nor aught baving been set down in malico. Pacific railroad bills were first before ber of the House of Representatives on the floor of the House, were pecu niarily interested in its passage enormous, Congress gave money to build this road to the amount of $70, greesed thus far, they stopped paying the government interest, and Mr. Boutwell permitted this outrage to go on until the arrears amounted to $6,-402,662, and the people were fast ac-
