BABY'S GRAVE.

DY WILLIAM MEIELEHAN There is a little spot of ground Beneath the willow's pending shade; 'Tis there, beneath a tiny mound, Our darling little babe was laid.

And there, there is a cross of stone,
With fragrant reces overspread;
The cross of stone, now moss o'er grown.
Marks where they faid our infant dead. Tis there the wild bird builds her nest,

Fearing no danger nor alarm; The wild bird knows that spot is blest, And, being blest, secure from harm. There, too, the fitting fireflies
Their fairy lasterns burn each night,
Think they the lifeless bahe will rise.
To chase again their sparks of light.

There, erickets in the evening sing,
And betterflies sport in the sun;
No longer now, on rapid wing,
Our babe's pursuing hands they shun. And flowers there, of every hue, Bloom now, as they were went before Bright battercups, and violets blue, Will deek our baby's brow no more.

We love that little spot of ground, Because our child there loved to play We love that little shaded mound, Because it holds his lifeless clay;

We love that little cross of stone,
That through the fragrant roses peeps
Bemaining with the dead alone,
It tells that there our baby sleeps.

Pride is the friend of the flatterer, the mother of envy, the marke of fury, the sin of devils, the devil of mankind. It hatos superiors, scorns inferiors, and danced attendance on the looking glass, and tied bark on the back of the head. Then Bray sat by the stove an hour and read the morning paper, while the Madame still continued to get ready. At last, just as he had reached the final paragraph of reading matter, and was begining on the advertisements, Madamo tied her bonnet strings under her chin, took one in long. Impering, loving look at the long lingering, loving look at the image reflected in the glass, and sweetly announced :
"Well, my dear, I'm ready!"

"Ready for what," asked Bray, in well affected astonishment. "To go to the depot, to be sure," said Mrs. Brayfogle, tartly.

Just keep on your things, and you'll be ready for the train to-morrow morning.

We are assured, however, that the next morning Mrs. B. was ready an hour ahead of time.

A good book and a good woman are excellent things for those who know how justly to appreciate their value. There are men, however, who judge of both from the beauty of the covering.

It was Porton the head of a boy 12 paces distant, sending a bullet clean through the center of the apple, which remained undisturbed on the boy's head.

Truth is violated by falsebood, and it may be equally outraged by silence.

There are men, however, who judge of stretching out hands to heaven, and gaining atrength with stature, to stand against the blaste, to defy the frosts, and head the returning Spring with bud and blossom, fragrance and fruit.

It was Rowland Hill who said:—"I and heal the returning Spring with bud and blossom, fragrance and fruit.

If some such progress of growth be not possible then the days of active, aggressive piety are already numbered.

The Orimes of Communism.

Day by day the developments go on, showing that the great Paris insurrection was not the work of a few fanatical would-be reformers, but the actual results of a world-wide conspiracy, which indulges in the Utopian dream of setting up a "Universal Social Republic," a government in which crime and licentiousness is to become the rule, and order and virtue the exthe rule, and order and virtue the exception.

It is not easy to trace the "International" back to its true and exact origin. It is thought, however, that it was first origanized in its present form at the time of the great International Exposition at Paris in the year 1862; but it is probable that the movement originated much carlier than this in the form of secret political acception organized in different NEW SERIES--VOL. 12, NO. 33.
