And went to Reimmstein & Broth-And there he got a hundsome suit, For half he paid to others. Now he is home, he looks so well, And their offset is such, That when they take their dully meal, They don't eat haif as much. And now he finds on Saturday night, With all their wants supplied, That he has money left to spend, And some to lay saide.

His good success, with cheerful smile, He gladly tells to all.
