WEDNESDAY MORNING, NOV. 8, 1871. The Ku-Klux and Suspension of the Writ of Habeas Corpus. corpus by the federal government in any of the States in a time of general peace would have been regarded for merly as a very series matter. Both Americans and English-all people of the Anglo-Saxon race—have ever carefully guarded their civil rights as protected by the writ of habeas corpus, and have taken alarm at the first step to deprive them of these rights. The writ of habeas corpus has been regarded as the bulwark of liberty, and it is this which more than anything else sword—he must in time of peace reled to the freedom that we enjoy. But times have changed. Our late and civil liberty. And will be not liberty. And will be not have some regard for the anomalous.

The proclamation of the President, dated Washington, October 17, 1871, which was published in nary occurrence or of no importance put under the rule of ignorant and ssue last Wednesday, places the counties of Spartanburg, York, Marion, Chester, Laurens, Newbury, Fairfield, Lancaster and Chesterfield, South Carolina, under martial law, on the ground that combinations and conspiracies exist to obstruct and hinder the execution of the civil law, and that the federal government is called upon to suspend the writ of habeas corpus and to govern by military authority, in accordance with the act of Congress passed last April. If the public mind were not so demoralized and so indifferent to this exercise of military authority in time of general peace there would be a more searching in-government. Fortunately, the independent press of this country is free to discuss the conduct of the government and to call public attention to this important mat-The independent press, as Junius said, is the palladium of our civil and religious liberties. Let us see, then, what foundation there was for proclaiming martial law and creating such a dangerous precedent for exercising arpitrary power in this free re-public. The President tells us in his proclamation that combinations and ed under martial which cannot be reached by the civil law, and these be calls rebellious and insurrectionary. By this he means what is generally known as the Ku-Klux. Should the clamor of a few partisan politicians be heeded more than the principles of local self-government, upon which the fabric of our institutions rests, there will be an end to civil liberty. It is a curious fact, showing the recklessness of the administration in the high-handed course it is pursning, that one of the most quiet counties in the State of South Carolina, that of Marion, is included in those placed be a clerical error. If it be necessary to put a portion of South Carolina under martial law for crimes against thorities? Nothing has occurred in popularity without temperance, re-South Carolina since the war com-parable to the frightful depredations and defiant conduct of these bandits in the adjoining State, entrenched in the swamps for months and committion, the cradle of disease, the waster ting the most diabolical murders and of time, the canker worm of felicity.

But, unfortunate-A suspension of the writ of habeas ly, he is not a civilian, and has little opportunity to study State affairs in the light of civil and constitutional His training has been military and his mind is imbued with military ideas. We think, as we said before, that he means well; but he has been led, doubtless, to extreme measures which are eruel to the people of South Carolina and dangerous to civil liberty, by partisan and narrow-minded politicians, who care only for their own immediate interests. The President should know that he can make more political capital and win the good will of the generous American people, both North and South, more by a kind and liberal policy to the Southerners than by military coercion.
