WEDNESDAY MORNING, DEC 6, 1871. STANDING AT THE GATE.

BY "EXSIES," We slood in sitemes at the gate, My own beloved and I, And watched to see the golden lamps Hung out in the evening sky. And when we can the western star There on the low of night.

Burn on the brow of night, I whispered that my love for her Would ever burn as bright.

Bereft we steed beside our gate, My little wife and I. And trusting raised our tearful eyes Up to the evening sky.

And white against the starry arch
That heat so bright above,
We saw two little anguel forms.
The children of ear love.

We stood together at the gale,
My aged selfs and I,
And see Night roll her sable car
For up the catterists;
But ston we bent our tracked gate
Along the agent word,
One mand build was beckening From out the land of rest.

MARRIED IN CALICO.

A young lady in Chicago, whose wedding was to have taken place on Thursday, October 10th, in church, whose "trousseau," with all modern elegancies, was ready, and whose bridal presents were in a state of elegant "forwardness," found herself, on Monday, October 9th, minus "troussenu," presents, house and home. The other substantial requirements for "keeping house," and for daily costume and requirements, were also a "total loss." The bridegroom was in a similar if not worse predicament, and the church where the ceremony was to have taken place was a heap

d blackened ruins. Here was a question of anusual importance before the joint family cont-cit.
