of the Capital, on Marshall street, stands a very large residence, one of the finest in Virginia. It occupies the finest in Virginia. It occupies The Richmond Whig says: Back a commanding eminence, known as President Hill. This house was built many years ago by a wealthy gentle-man named Brockenbrough. He aspired to have the most costly and beautiful residence and surroundings in Richmond, and to that end spared neither money or pains. The grounds were laid out in beautiful style, traversed by graveled walks, and adorned by statuary and fountains. When the Capital of the Confederney was removed from Montgomery to Richmond, the City Conneil here proposed to do something handsome for "President Davis;" so they bought the Brockenbrough residence, with the intention of presenting it to him. When he arrived here from Montgom ery, the city authorities had gone so far as to pay for the property, and had the title vested in Mr. Davis. A formal presentation of the property was then made to Davis, by the City Council when, much to their surprise and mortification, he respectfully and firmly refused the present. He warmly thanked the city authorities for the could not, consistent with his own could not, consistent with his own self-respect and the dignity of his office, accept the gift. The city, however, refused to take the property back, and for a time there was a quanresiy to wait upon callers and supply them with back, and for a time there was a quan-dary. Mr. Davis, however, held out firmly, and at last the matter was firmly, and at last the matter was Delaines, Lines, Drillings, Califors, part of the of the property, and an agreement by Ready-made Clothing, Boots and Shore, Hate and Davis to live in it during his term of Caps—all of the best material and made to order office. His "term" was cut off by the operations of the Federal army, and has never been filled out. The prop-

I don't wish to draw any contrast between the conduct of Jeff. Davis and Grant in the matter of accepting houses and lots as gifte, but the reader can do so for himself

After gazing at the rectangular three-storied, stuccoed pile before mentioned, thinking of the hopes and fears, disappointments, sorrows and joys that must have successfully in-habited the city's three story house, I passed on to take a look at the resi dence occupied by General Lee during the war, and yet known as the "Lee It is a plain, unpretending, three-story brick building, No. 707 Franklin street, and is now occupied by Mrs. Geo. Davis. Whether it was the property of Lee or not, I do not know, but at all events he occupied it. At the beginning of the war a number of wealthy citizens of Richmond made up a handsome sum of money to buy General Lee a house suited to his station and rank. But he refused to accept the profered present and the money was refunded to the subscribers. Here we have two in stances of refusals to necept houses and lots by two of the most prominent men in the late Confederacy. In the light of our President's conduct, these two old Confederates were great
