LETTERS FROM BRADY TOWNSHIP.

Mr. Barton as "Taxpayer," in his letter of January 19th, charged the school directors and auditors of this township with all manner of crimes, I beg leave to say a few words in defense of these most abused officers.

In the first place, he "believes they are hiding their faces, because, from the amount of school money collected every year, we ought to have more school or more money on hand at the end of the year."

Now, Mr. Editor, I feel very anxious to learn his method of figuring out school expenses: since we have some of the ablest mathematicians and best business men in the township in whom "Taxpayers" dare not accuse of fraud—in person—either in public or private affairs, filling the office of school directors, and they have been unable to produce the happy result "Taxpayer" pretends to have arrived at. He is "satisfied that the school directors are not watching the money matters very closely." Really, he must be easily satisfied, when he can be satisfied by the meaningless babble of a few individuals, who do not pretend to know about the financial affairs of the township, and who have no right to be meddling with the school money, as he is easily pleased to be in the position of "Babbling."

Very good; the settlement is open to all; but "Taxpayer" is no better in figures than in telling the truth, I fear the community will not derive much benefit from his watching. However, since he is determined to be on hand, I hope the Supervisors will take warning from this evasive phrasology, and clear the road from their office, so as to secure a safe passage for him to the Auditor's office. He "believes there are some feathering their nests." Truly, one would think so, and that all the feathers were being plucked from this unhappy goose, from the way he squeals; but, what caused such a belief to enter his bright mind, is beyond my comprehension.

Now, look at the inconsistency of his next assertion. He pretends to know (with a trifle) what amount of money "should be on hand at the end of the year," if the auditors would only do their duty; after saying "the school and road taxes amount to four or five thousand dollars a year." (He doesn't know exactly which.) Pretty well guessed. What if it were a margin of a thousand dollars? That is but a trifle, in comparison to the sum he would have you believe had been stolen by the Auditor. He is "satisfied the taxpayers will take the matter in hand, if the accounts are not shown up in their true light. This, I suppose, would be a very good arrangement, so far as "Taxpayer" is concerned, as he could then get his nose into affairs which he can't get a sniff of by the ballot.

The fact is, Mr. Editor, I think "Taxpayer" can be turned by any direction, "to suit our purposes,"—just as a weathervane turns on its pivot in obedience to the wind; and is of too small calibre to be of any account, except as a "blow-pipe." I fully agree with him, that we should have more school, and think it a pity the question was not agitated when he and I were school boys.

I will close for the present, hoping that "Taxpayer" will not get high on his horse, but that the advantage of the "blow-pipe" he has by his remarkable shrewdness discovered, probe the matter to the bottom, reveal all the hidden evil, expose the dark-doed villain, and prevent him in some sense a man. Yours, J. W. HAYES.

WONDERFUL EXERCISES.—A few weeks ago some of our "Youngsters" took their heads to make an excursion to Altoona, but there were several Paes and Mas around, who took it into their heads to veto this movement, because of the rumor that the small pox was raging in the mountain village. And the aforesaid youngsters acquiesced, as all good children do. The parents were the only "High and mighty" ones for the occasion, and their decision was unanimously approved by the citizens. Why some of our contemporaries should "take on" about this private affair, we cannot understand; but it seems to us they should allow us to just as they do as we please—in regulating our domestic affairs.

Write about our stumps, our logs and business affairs as much as you please, but don't debate our household regulations, or we shall pronounce you meddling. The Lock Haven Democrat got off the following re-liable statement: "The Town Council of Clearfield, we are told, have enough private business, but not enough public duty to do in the township, and are not to be troubled with the small pox. The young bloods of that place made arrangements for an excursion to Altoona, where they were to be met by the 'High and mighty' ones for the occasion, and their decision was unanimously approved by the citizens. Why some of our contemporaries should 'take on' about this private affair, we cannot understand; but it seems to us they should allow us to just as they do as we please—in regulating our domestic affairs."
