JUDGE TAYLOR -- We notice that Brookville has lost one of her most esteemed and worthy citizens. The Republican says:

Hon. P. Taylor, of this place, died at Gener New York, on Friday test, the took testant. Mr. Taylor had been suffering from a chronic disease of the stomach for a number of years, and failing to get relief from the ordinary course of treatment of trying a water-core establishment at that place. On Thursday his friends were telegraphed that he was sinking fast, and although B. D. Taylor, his only son at home, took the first opportunity of harrying to him, he was already dead some hours before his arrival. His body was brought hom and was followed to the grave, in the cemetery, by one of the largest processions ever witnessed in Brookville. The Judge was an estimable gentleman, occupying a prominent place in the esteem and respect of our people. He served one term as Associate Judge of our courts, and at the time of Bank of Brookville. This ingenious machine, for which a patent has This ingenious machine, for which a patent has just been served, it is confidently believed will amperede all others in use or offered to the public. It is constructed so that it furrows, plants and sows at a time, at equal distances apart, bette ways, dropping four. Eve or six grains in each hill, as the worker may determine before commencing, covering the corn when dropped, smoothing down its own furrow and leaving the ground in better consistent than before planting.

It is in itself a complete self screking machine, requiring no litted assistance and doing the work better and with greater regularity and precision requiring no fitted assistance and doing the work better and with greater regularity and precision than it could possibly be done by hand, at less than one-tenth the labor.

Anybody that can drive, with this Planter can Anybody that can drive, with this Planter can go into a field prepared for corn and furrow, drop and cover ten to fifteen sorre shally, its capacity being limited only by the distance a team can be steadly driven. It is so constructed that when not planting or in turning at the end of the forcew, by a more touch it is raised off the ground, thrown out of goar and moved backward or forward, where you may want it, without dropping the corn or touching the carts.

Practically it ignores men, hore and plows in corn planting, and make that which has herestofore been hard labor a mere pastime for a boy, or about healthy exercise for a lary man.
