TURPENTINE MAKING. A Characteristic North Carolina Industry. (From the Special Correspondent of the Tribune.)

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., Oct. 25.—The turpentine woods of North Carolina are in the Southern and Eastern counties, extending nowhere north of the latitude of Raleigh, and but little west of the centre of the State.

Some of the turpentine orchards are worked by the men who own them, and in a few cases, where a man has a large forest, he distills his own turpentine.

A turpentine forest is not the dismal place I had imagined it to be from descriptions I had read and illustrations I had seen.

After the crude turpentine has been collected in barrels, it is either taken to market and sold, or to the nearest distillery.

When a new tree is to be worked, the first thing necessary is to tap it and construct the box or pocket which is to catch the crude turpentine as it oozes out and runs down the side of the tree.

The annual property of the turpentine business last year was due to two causes. The first was the war in France, which interfered with the production in that country, and the other the abandonment of many of the substitutes for spirits of turpentine in making paints.

Their Story.

At Detroit last week, on their way eastward from Canada, were married a pair of long-tried lovers whose story is made public by the Post of that city.

Sale of Imported Stock and Poultry at the Harkness Bazaar.

On last Thursday, another of those large sales of imported stock and poultry took place at the Bazaar of Alfred M. Harkness, in Philadelphia.

Pacific Railroad Statistics.

When the charter for the Pacific Railroad was granted, the length of the road was fixed at 1657 miles, and it was upon this basis that Congress voted its subsidies in bonds and lands.

The Origin of Corruption.

We have very little faith in the religious views entertained by the Rev. O. B. Frothingham, of New York, but when he treats a moral subject he seems to be about as near right as most men.
