Little and pallid, poor and shy, With a downcast look in her soft gray eye; No scornful toss of her queenly head, But a drooping bend of the neck instead; o ringing laugh, and no danbing feet, o subtle wiles and abandon sweet,

No "Bolly Varden" coquetts airs:
No high heeled hoots to throw her down stair
No yatchting jacket and nautical style.
With a sailor's hat that she calls her "tile."
But "Lady" is stamped on her quiet brow;
And she crept into my heart I can't tell how;
Not made to dazzle—nor born to shine—
Nobady's—nobody's darling—hut mine!

No saucy, ravishing, girish grass,
But a settled calm on the sweet pale face;
No sparking chatter and repartee;
Very sitent and still is she.
White and still is my pearl of pearls,
Tet to me she seemeth the quoon of girls;
Why I leve her I can't define,
For she's nobody's—nobody's darling—but mine consideration, and to convince the instructor of youth of the necessity of moral and religious culture. This is the more essential, because the symptoms of decline in a State are first manifested in the young. Plutarch tells us that Lycurgus wound up the strings of Sparta, which he found relaxed with luxury, to a stranger tone; but no one was found able to wind up those of Athens when vice and corruption struck at the foundations of her youth. It is important, then, that the morals of the young should be preserved; and he is to be honored who blends the moral, intellectual and spiritual in his system of instruction.

A TERRIBLE RIDE.

Hamlet, the philosophic Dane, described the "insolence of office" with the oppressor's wrong, the law's delays, and the spurns that patient merit of the unworthy takes, as among the evils too intolerable to be borne by a believe, and it appears at times as the Constitution without fail. It would alone, be worth to the Comevils too intolerable to be borne by a proud spirit. But Shakspeare's sensitive hero had little experience of that bloated and swaggering insolence of that prevails in the present generation, or he would not have hesitated long about making his quietus with a bare bodkin. The pertness of the minions who basked in the sunshine of royal favor, or the superciliousness of a minister, was perhaps the utmost of the evil that he felt. But what was that in comparison with the official insolence which is witness. what was that in comparison with rooms on Saturday night, found him-the official insolence which is witness-self "broken," without even so much the official insolence which is witnessed this day in a free commonwealth? Almost every school and college has its peculiar mode of instruction.—
Many are excellent in their way, and so far as intellectual culture is concerned, could not, perhaps, be much improved. We hold, however, that any system of instruction that looks alone to the cultivation of the intellectual faculties, is defective. Edgention, to be effective size salutary, must comprehend the maniel, moral and spiritual attributes of being, for these spiritual attributes of being, for these are indespensable to a perfect whole. No matter what may be the the literary and scholastic attainments of a man—no matter to what extent the mind may have been schooled in science and art—unless the moral nature has received a corresponding described in the spiritual attributes of being, for these who have never sought office, and are indifferent alike to the frowns and blandishments of power. But nothing will be left undone in the effort to make them feel the power of Pennsylvania's master.

The Roumanian Jews-The Colonisa tion Scheme.

As announced in the Herald of the

As announced in the Herald of the 2d, a letter has been received at the General Land Office, in Washington, to the effect that a movement is on foot, the object of which is to settle a colony of Roumanian and Continental Jews in the United States. It appears that a company has been organized to encourage and superintend the exodus. The company is in possession of a paid-up capital of one million five bundred thousand dellars. It is intended to settle in this country some tended to settle in this country some eight thousand families, numbering in all not fewer than forty thousand perall not fewer than forty thousand persons. The question, as presented to the Land Office, is whether the United States government will extend to the company a title to a tract of land—say two bundred and fifty thousand acres—it being the intention of the company to form a distinct and separate antiquent, composed entirely of rate settlement, composed entirely of the sons and daughters of Israel. The answer given by the Acting Commis-sioner is that there is no law provid-ing for such a disposal of the public lands.

The whole question thus opened up is of large scope and of deep and gen-eral interest. The condition of the

been a scandal to the civilized nations.

Latterly the treatment to which they have been subjected in the Danubian Principalities has recalled the inemory of the Dark Ages, when they were looked upon as the chemies at once of God and men and when Christies. God and man, and when Christian governments, so called, considered it first their privilege to rob them and then their duty to torture and destroy them. We can conceive of no more harrowing record of human suffering than would be a history of the persecution of the Jews. In Spain, in the days of Ferdinand and Isabella, the The Chicago Times asks, "How can we escape fire?" The New York Commercial answers, "The Gospel of fers you every encouragement."

Catholies, a decree was issued expeling from Spanish territory every Jew who refused to deny his faith and declare himself a Christian; and this harsh decree was rigorously executed.
