WEDNESDAY MORNING MARCH 5, 1873.

Keep Stock Warm. The advice which makes the head ing of this article might almost be said to be a stereotyped maxim for farmers, so frequently does it appear in all the papers of the country, both agricultural and those which have an agricultural column. The philosophy of the advice is that stock is much more comfortable when protected from severe cold, that it takes less food to keep them, and that they do better. Of course it does not imply that we should build our barns so that they can be warmed by fires. As generally understood by farmers, it means battern your stables tight and keep out all the cold.

Where this is done and no arrange ment is made for supplying them with fresh air by ventilation, it is as bad or worse than allowing them to be exposed to considerable cold. We want to advise our farmers who keep stock warm in this way to study physiology enough to know the value of fresh air to animals as well as men. There is scarcely a farmer in the country who keeps his stock warm who does not run into a worse extreme by making them breathe air loaded with effluvia for hours every day. Observe the character of the air in the stables when you open the door in the morning, and you will be convinced of it.

We once heard a sheep farmer say that the best place to stable sheep in winter was in a dry ten-acre lot, sheltered from driving winds. The only advantage in this was that they could have plenty of fresh, pure air. We heard another farmer say that, in wintering twenty steers, he stabled ten and let ten go to the stack all PEACE IN BUROPE! winter, and the ten outside did the best. It was easy to see, on examining the stables, that ten of them had been deprived of good air, and of course this would keep them from doing well.

It is a common remark among farmers that cattle running out all winter, if well fed, come out in the spring strong and in better condition to grow than those too carefully housed. This appears to argue against stabling them at all, but when we look at the matter closely, we find it an MULSONBURG, where he can always be found ready to wait upon callers and supply them with argument in favor of fresh air, cleanliness, and exercise; and if we take sufficient pains to supply this condition to our stock that is stabled we will then learn the true value of the maxim. "Keep your stock warm."-Ohio Farmer.

"Charity for All."

The Harrisburg Telegraph publishes a pious article, headed "Charity for All." This ring organ now finds it very convenient to clamor for charity to the convicted secundrels of the Mobilier scandal; but no paper could have been more uncharitable towards the late Liberals, when on principle they bolted from a corrupt party .-"Never kick a man when he is going down hill" is very applicable to the forgiveness of Radical thieves, but in the opinion of this same ringster it found no endorsement in the late campaign. Bombastic swell! What care you, Telegraph man, for charity save so far as you can excuse your hellish thefts. Charity indeed! What is it but an acknowledgement on your part that these rogues are guilty? You are a pretty christian sneak to call upon your readers to recollect the ommon spirit of our christianity," and forgive the Mobilier Congressmen.

How much do you get for your christian (?) defense? Shame! Do you think that all voters are as corrupt and debased as you and your Mobilier ringsters? You talk in your paper to a large class of corruptionists, no doubt, but not all voters will believe your sentiments-purchased for dollars and cents. "Charity for All" will not "kiver enough" even to excuse you and your Congressmen .-Stand on your manbood, if you have any. Don't call for charity for theives and swindlers, to the infinite disgust of intelligent voters. "Consistency, thou," &c .- Bellefonte Watchman.
