FAMILLY OBLIGATIONS TO SUPPORT Poon RELATIONS .- Some time since there was a case in Court involving the obligation of members of familes to contribute to the support of other persons of the same families who are unable to support themselves. The law in this case is not generally known, nor is it generally noderstood how far these family obligations extend. Be-sides the ordinary duty of husband and father to support his wile and children, the law of Pennsylvania re-At Toledo, Ohio, on Thursday, two quires in the case of "every poor per son not able to work," and who has children or grandchildren, parents or grandparents, of "sufficie that such parents or grandparents children or grandchildren, "shall re try, to excite susplicing, now who is of the thieree body baside, without has been and so and provide a state of the interve structure in the state of the structure interve structure in the state of the structure structure in the state of the structure structure in the structure in the state of the structure structure in the state of the structure structure in the structure interve st lieve and maintain such poor person,'
