Something Tangible Accomplished

The real character and force of the Farmers' movement in the west is intelligently and clearly discussed by Mr. S. M. Smith, the Secretary of the State Farmers' Association in Illinois, in reply to recent criticisms of a num ber of journals, condeming the ten-dencies of the farmers' organization, dencies of the farmers' organization, and charging that its power has been misused or diverted to improper purposes—such, for instance, as the defeat of Judge Lawrence, at the recent judical election. Mr. Smith isto some extent an authorized representative extent an authorized representative in Joseph Shaw as son. and spokesman for this new power in the politics of the country, and his views merit careful examination.— Aside from the history of the growth of the farmers' clubs, the circum-stances which called them into being, the forces that have held them together, and the progress they have made up to this time, he makes three points in connection with the Farmer's movement:

First. The educational characte and effect of the clubs and granges, in awakening among the farmers a real-izing sense of their own responsibility for their own grievances. As Mr. Smith expresses it the farmers adhere more than any other class to the doc trine that "whatever is, is right." It is difficult to arouse such a class under any circumstances, but more difficult than usual in the case of the farmers, because they live isolated lives, have few near neighbors, each engrossed with his own affairs, and rarely meetting his fellows in the way of general discussion. The farmers' clubs and granges have brought these people granges have brought these people together, their educational value has Designated East VLES of Caselingres, &c., thus been important, and they are now prepared to enter on the work of devising a remedy for their grievliberty, unrestrained by old political associations or allegiance, to throw their strength hereafter as to them may seem best. This, Mr. Smith claims, is the greatest achievement of the farmers' associations. They have the farmers' associations. They have found at most emphatically decided to go into politics on their ewn account; to break off from all former political power, and hold themselves responsible for the corruption and abuses of the future, and the punishment thereof.

But the farmers say that they do not ask this, and that they only desire that the railroads shall be constrained to do their part of the work of the wo do their part of the work of human society at a fair and reasonable profit on the capital actually invested; and not exact charges framed to guarantee dividends on fictitious capital stock, in the interest of stock jobbers on

It is not probable the farmers' movement will ever schieve any decided show of strength in Pennsylvania, except in one particular, and this em-bodies a grievance under which all classes suffer. The example of the Western farmers organizing in the interest of purity in politics and honesty in administration will extend to this State and the effect we believe will be most beneficial. The farmers as a class hold much stricter views of official accountability than the residents of towns and cities, but their isolation prevents this sentiment from having its just weight. Organization will cure this defeat in Pennsylvania and elsewhere .- Altoona Tribune.

A large cavern in Hot Springs Mountain is known by the name of the Murderer's Cave. The only white man that is ever known to have en-tered this cave is an old hunter that is said to have lived, or is still living, in that cavern, and yearly comes here with his furs and peltries, the labor of his year's services in trapping. He, however, always brings with samples of these silver cres and pre-cious stones, which he disposes of to Heaters, Ranges, Low Grates the jewellers, and his silver bullion to the bankers. This cavern is called Murderer's Cave, from the fact, so report goes among the "natives," that no man that had ventured into this cavern bad ever been seen alive again.
