There is an old superstition that praise is too good a thing to be given to the children; that it is too rich for their mental and moral digestion.—
Some parents are so afraid that a child Some parents are so afraid that achild will grow proud, that they never praise him, and this course is often disastrous. It is apt to produce either too much self-assertion—for self-assertion is a legitimate outgrowth of the withholding of commendation to which one is entitled—or to engender which one is entitled—or to engender as alf-district or melancholy hopeless. ness of disposition.

Praise is sunshine to a child, and there is no child that does not need it. It is the high reward of one's struggle to do right. Thomas Hughes says that you can never get a man's best out of him without praise. You certainly can never get a child's best out of him without praise. Many a sensitive child, we believe, dies of hunger for kind commendation. for kind commendation. Many a child, starving for the praise that a parent should give, runs off eagerly after the designing flattery of others. To withhold praise where it is due is dishonest, and in the case of a child, such a course often leaves a stinging sense of injustice. Motives of common justice, as well as regard for the future of the child, should influence the parent to give generous praise for all that deserves it. Of course there is a difference in the constitution of children. Some cannot bear so much praise as others, and some need a great

It should never be indiscriminate We remember a wonderful woman who taught school in one village until she had educated a part of three generations. She was one of the most successful of teachers. But her success lay in her gift of praising with discrimination. A bad boy who was a good scholar got praise for his bril-liancy, sandwitched between her abomination for bad behavior, and so was won to better life; and we recall a good girl who had no gift of learning rapidly, but who was saved from utter despair by the praise she got for her untiring industry. Into the discouraged hearts of the children the found at J. M. KRATZER'S. praise of the teacher came like sun light. And the virtues, like other fruits, can only ripen in the sunshine .-

The Average Pickpocket.

It is generally presumed by a ma-jority of our citizens, that pickpock-ets possess some indiscribable peculiarity, in their personal appearance, by which they can readily be distin-guished from honest folks. Many peo-ple entertain the idea that this kind of thioves must necessarily bave a low forehead, a villainous countenance, and wear a large cloak to conocal false

SHAWLY, Searfs, Necktics, Collars, Veils, forehead, a villainous countenance, also the Josephine Seamless Kid Gloves, at met 26

J. M. KRATZER'S. and wear a large cloak to conceal false hands, and a kit of pickpockets' in-struments. This mistaken supposition accounts, in a large measure, for the ease with which so many robberies are committed. In many cases the caution of the victims assists the caution of the victims assists the paircage of the thinves. While the Lumber City, Pa., March 20-1f. suspicious glances around, with the intention of avoiding some one who corresponds with their mental picture of a rascal, some genteelly appearing personage, whom they do not for a moment suspect, relieves them of their valuables. The appearance of a tastefully attired lady, with the modest countenance and delicately formed hands, who apologizes so gracefully for her rudeness and haste in leaving a car, does not suggest the fact that she has just picked a pocket. The plain, honest looking old gentleman, who wears an expression as benignant as Beecher's and assists an old lady across the street with a solicitude that excites admiration, does not conform with the general impression of English Bill, the notorious English pickpocket. There are some suspicious looking faces among these people, just as there are among lawyers, doctors, merchants, or any other class of the community, but they will compare favorably in personal appearance with any body of honest citizens, phrenologi to the contrary notwithstanding.

Hen Palace. The first family of the United Society of Shakers at Canterbury, have erceted a building for the accommo-dation of their domestic fowls that is well worthy of the name of "hen palace." The building is of wood, twenty-four by seventy feet, with a flat roof covered with gravel. It is covered with shingles on the outside, whitewashed, and the wood trimmings, such as the window scales.

We also sell three different kinds of HAY HAKES. The COMLEY, self-discharging Rake, HAGERSTOWN and LANCASTER RAKE—which we say are three of the best Rakes in the wood without fear of successful contradiction—Be sure and see them before buying any other.

THRESHERS. mings, such as the window sashes, etc., are painted in the same color .-For a foundation an excavation was dug down below the frost line and filled in with small stones; the underpinnings is of stone and mortar. On the inside the house has four partitions with neatly plastered walls.—

In each partition are boxes with sand and gravel, in which the fowls can scratch to their heart's content. On the west and north sides are walks, and on the edge of these walks are the nests with side doors to give access to them .-For light, there are two large windows in each section below. Ladders lead to the loft above where the fowls roost. The loft is divided into four parts, each having a large window.— On the cast side of the lower story is a separate room containing two large arch kettles and a stove for the cooking of potatoes, etc., with which the fowls are fed. Under this room is a neat cemented cellar for storage.-All wood work within reach of the hens is whitewashed, to secure per-fect neatness and cleanliness, for which the Shakers are distinguished. During this summer, running water will be introduced into the house, and two yards will be made in which the lowls can take the air.

The Republican party is of the people," says an organ of that aggregation of plunderers and salary grabbers. Doubtless it is so. Among the most conspicuous people in it are Ben Butler, Matt Carpenter, a score of Congressional bribe-takers and an indefinite number of Credit Mobilier thieves, two or three hundred salary grabbers and more official tax-caters than any other party in this country ever contained. All these thieves, rascals, robtanded. All these thieves, rascals, robtanded to the contained to the undersigned, all persons indebted to said estate will please make immediate payment, and those having claims or demands will present them properly subscritically for settlement without delay.
