

CLEARFIELD, PA.

WEDNESDAY MORNING AUGUST 17, 1876.

PERFECTLY SATISFIED.

We were never more satisfied with one man who was perfectly satisfied with the weather at all times and under all circumstances. It was Chubb. No matter what the condition of the weather, Chubb was always contented and happy, and willing to affirm that the weather of things at any given moment was the very best state that could be devised. In summer, when the thermometer bolted up among the nineties, Chubb would come to the front door with beads of perspiration standing out all over his face, until his head looked like a raspberry, and would look at the sky and say, "Splendid! perfectly splendid! No matter whether for the poor and for the rich companies and the washerwomen! I never saw such magnificent weather for drying shirts. They don't shake up any such climatic as this in Italy. Gimme my umbrella, Harriet, while I sit out yer on the steps and enjoy it." In winter, when the mercury would creep down fifteen degrees below zero, and the cold was severe enough to freeze chairs of ice, Chubb would sit out on my fence and exclaim, "By gracious, Adeler, did you ever see such weather as this? I like an atmosphere that freezes up your very marrow. It helps the coal trade and keeps the snakes quiet. Don't talk of summer time to me. Gimme cold and give it to me stiff." When there was drought, Chubb used to meet us in the street and remark, "No rain yet, I see! Magnificent, isn't it? I want my weather dry, I want it with the dampness left out. Moisture breeds fever and ague, and wets your clothes. If there's anything I despise it's to carry an umbrella. No rain for me, if you please." When it rained for a week and swamped the country, Chubb often dropped in to see us and to observe, "I dunno how you feel about this yer rain, Adeler, but it allers seems to me that the heavens never drop no blessings but when we have a long wet spell. It makes the corn jump and cleans the sewers and keeps chewing tobacco from getting too dry. I wouldn't give a cent to live in a climate where there was no rain. Pat me on the Niles and I'd die in a week. Soak me through and through to the inside of my undershirt, and I feel as if life was brighter and beautiful, and sorrow nothing but nonsense." On a showery day, when the sun shone brightly at one moment and at the next the rain poured in torrents, Chubb used to stand at the window and exclaim, "Harriet, if you'd 'sposed me how I liked the weather I'd've said just as it is now. What I like is weather that is streaked, like a piece of fat and lean bacon. A little shine and a little rain, Mix'em up and give us plenty of both and I'm your man." Chubb was always happy in a thunder storm, and one day, after the lightning had knocked down two of his trees and torn his chimney to pieces, we went over to see him. He was standing by the prostrate trees, and he at once remarked, "Did you ever know of a man having such luck as this? I was going to chop down them two trees to-morrow, and as that chimney never drew'd well, I had concluded to have it rebuilt. And that gorgeous old storm has fixed things just as I want 'em. Put me in a thunder storm and let the lightning play around me and I'm at home. I'd rather have one storm that would tear the bowels out of the American continent than a dozen of yer little dribblin' waterin'-pot showers. If I can't have a ripplin' and roarin' storm, I don't want none." One day Chubb was upon his roof for a while, when a tornado struck him, lifted him off, carried him a quarter of a mile and dashed him with such terrible force against a fence, that his leg was broken. As they carried him home we met him, and when we asked him how he felt, he opened his eyes languidly and said, "Immortal Moses! what a storm that was! When it does blow, it suits the senior member of the Chubb family if it blows hard. I'd give both legs if we could have a squall like that every day. I'd then be fainting. We want Chubb elected president. He is the only man in the universe who don't growl at the weather, and he ought to have glory and honor.—Max Adeler.

Brigham and His Wives. Brigham Young is reported to have expressed himself as follows, in one of his recent "sermons" in Salt Lake City: "I wish my women to understand that what I am going to say is for them as well as others, and I want those who are here to tell their sisters, yes, all the women in the community. I am going to give you from this time to the sixth of October, for my reaction, that you may determine whether you wish to stay with your husbands or not, and I am going to set every one at liberty, and say to them, 'now go your way.' And my wives have got to do one of two things, either round up their shoulders to endure the afflictions of this world, and live their religion—that is, polygamy—or they must leave; for I will not have them scolding and fighting about me. I will not set all at liberty. Who are my wives too? Yes, liberate you all. I want to go somewhere or do something to get rid of the whiners. I do not want them to receive part of the truth and spin the rest out of doors. Let every man thus treat his wives, keeping raiment enough to cover his body, and I say to your wives, take all that I have and be set at liberty; but if you stay with me, you shall comply with the law of God in every respect, and that, too, without any murmuring or whining. You must fulfill the law of God in every respect, and round up your shoulders to walk up to the mark without any granting."

WELL OFF.—Iowa is the only State of the Union represented as being entirely free from debt, and yet it is a State that has doubled its population in the last ten years, and places it in the matter of population as number eleven in the Union, against number twenty in 1860. With such growth and prosperity, to be entirely free from debt, is a most enviable distinction.

Since the clergy have held prayers for the benefit of the press, the Chicago Times suggests that editors unite in supplication for the diffusion of intelligence among the clergy.
