

I never saw an Angel, Except the ones in books: I don't believe a mortal Knows how an angel looks. We guess at something airy, With trailing wings of white, With amber tresses floating, And gossamer strangely bright.

But I believe earth's angels Walk here in mortal guise, Though we discern not their faces, Through heavy-lidded eyes, Or see them as they leave us, Who walked beneath us here, Their angelhood quite hidden, Because it lived so near.

I can remember angels Who seemed like common folks, Who wore old-fashioned bonnets, And faded winter cloaks; Who came when dire disaster Crowded lower human souls, Or younger destinies crowded The dear maternal lap.

With curving arms wide open To take the weeping lid, With patient face to listen To children's wailing cry, What better things could angels Than listen to their story, And bid them promise new?

I think of friends' angels, Upon whose faded hair, There shone a crown of glory, And eyes that shone like stars; When tender love, true-hearted, Forgave the wrongs it knew, And patient, loving gaze answered The tears of lost and sore.

How Paper Collars are Made. One hundred and fifty million paper collars, it has been estimated, are yearly used in the United States; and statistics show that even this immense number is steadily increasing as improvements in the manufacture multiply.

The collars are made of two varieties; of paper and cloth combined and of paper alone. The best materials are used in the manufacture of the paper. It is supplied in heavy white sheets 16 by 36 inches in dimension, weighing 125 pounds to the ream.

On being received in the manufactory, it is sent to the enameling room, where each sheet is covered with a thin layer of enamel and then placed on racks heated by steam pipes until thoroughly dry. This work is performed entirely by hand, and the enamel mixture applied with an ordinary brush.

After the sheets have become thoroughly dry, they are embossed to imitate cloth. To produce the effect muslin is tightly stretched and pasted on plates of tin corresponding in size to the sheet of paper. Between pairs of plates thus prepared, the paper is laid, about fourteen sheets at a time being thus arranged, making a pile of alternate layers of paper and tin.

The whole is then pressed between heavy steel rollers, the pressure being sufficient to imprint the threads of the cloth on the paper, so that a perfect fac simile is thus obtained. Each sheet is then polished by passing it over awfully revolving brushes when it is ready to be transformed into collars.

The Californians have a new domestic fowl, the chaparral cock or churra, which is easily domesticated, and when properly cooked, is said to be superior to chicken for eating. Mr. Geo. B. Markel, a liberal Presbyterian of Hazelton, Pa., has green $30,000 to endow a professorship in Lafayette College.

From many sections of Illinois come reports of distressing drouth. The corn and grass are drying up, and unless rain soon comes to the relief of the farmers they will have to commence feeding grain to their stock. A young Texan man, who was kept on jury duty for eight hours, complains that he got seven letters from his wife inquiring why he was away so long, and that he had a very affecting interview with his mother-in-law as soon as he was released.

Gen. Robert Patterson, still living in fine health in Philadelphia in his 82d year, was a captain in the regular army in the second war with England (1812), sixty one years ago. Owing to the failure of Brown, Lancaster & Co., of Baltimore, the Tredegar Iron Works at Richmond, Va., on Thursday discharged 600 to 700 men employed in car building. The Italian citizens of Philadelphia have formed a society to secure a colossal statue of "Christopher Columbus" to be placed in Fairmount Park, July 4th, 1876.

The Death Agony.

Death is usually preceded by a group of phenomena that has received the name of the death agony. In most cases of disease the beginning of this concluding period is marked by a sudden improvement of the functions. It is the last gleam springing from the dying flame; but soon the eyes become fixed and insensible to the action of light; the nose grows open and cold; the mouth, wide open, seems to call for the air that falls; the cavity within is parched, and the lips, as if withered, cling to the curves of the teeth.

The last movements of respiration are spasmodic, and a wheezing sound may be heard at some distance, caused by obstruction of the bronchial tubes with a quantity of mucus. The breath is cold, the temperature of the skin lowered. If the heart is examined, we note the weakening of its sounds and pulsations. The hands placed in its neighborhood, feel no throbbing. Such is the physiology of the person in the last moments of death in the greater number of cases; that is, when death follows upon a period of illness of some duration. The death struggle is seldom painful, and almost always the patient feels nothing of it. He is plunged into a comatose stupor, so that he is no longer conscious of his situation or his sufferings, and he passes insensibly from life to death in a manner that renders it sometimes difficult to fix the exact instant at which a dying person, regained by his last speech and hearing, and spent them in repeating for the last time some of those sweet harmonies which he called his "Prayers to God."

Some diseases, moreover, are most peculiarly marked by the gentleness of the dying agony. Of all the ills that cheat us while killing by pin-pricks, consumption is that which wears longer for us the illusive look of health, and best conceals the misery and horror of dying. Nothing can be compared with the halucination of the senses and the liveliness of hope which mark the last days of the consumptive. He takes the burning of his destroying fever for a healthful symptom, he forms his plans and smiles calmly and cheerfully on his friends, and suddenly, some morning of a quiet night, he falls into a sleep and never wakes.—Popular Science Monthly.

What to do with Trouble. Don't try to quench your sorrow in rum and narcotics. If you begin this, you must keep right on with it until it leads you to ruin; or if you must add physical pain and the consciousness of degradation to the sorrow you seek to escape. Of all the wretched men, his condition is most pitiful who has sought to drown his grief in drink, awakened from his delirium with shattered nerves, aching head, and depressed mind, to face the trouble again. That which at first was painful to contemplate will, after drink, seem unbearable.

Ten to one the fatal drink will be again and again sought till its victim sinks a hopeless, pitiful and total wreck. Work is your true remedy. If misfortune hits you hard, let you something else hard—pitch into something with a will. There's nothing like good solid absorbing work to cure trouble. If you have met with loss you don't want to lie awake thinking of them. You want sleep, calm sound sleep, and to eat your dinner with appetite. But you can't unless you work. If you say you don't feel like work, go for a loafing all day, to tell Tom, Dick or Harry the story of your woes, you'll lie awake, and keep your wife awake by tossing, spoil her temper and your own breakfast next morning, and begin tomorrow feeling ten times worse than you did to-day.

There are some troubles that time only heals and perhaps some that never can be healed at all, but all can be helped by the paraffin work. Try it, if you are thus afflicted. The Californians have a new domestic fowl, the chaparral cock or churra, which is easily domesticated, and when properly cooked, is said to be superior to chicken for eating. Mr. Geo. B. Markel, a liberal Presbyterian of Hazelton, Pa., has green $30,000 to endow a professorship in Lafayette College.

A poor lone widow, with seven children and a sore throat, paid the necessary taxes, and took six dogs from the Milwaukee pound. He who reforms himself has done more towards reforming the public than a crowd of noisy, impotent priests. It is a common fault never to be dissatisfied with our fortune, nor dissatisfied with our understanding. It is surprising how quickly man who dislikes red hair will fall in love with a red headress.
