Japanese Fans. Many of these fan-pictures are illus-trations of national classics, fairy tales, and historic legends. Briefly, it is related that a company of priests, who dwelt by themselves in a temple, were affrighted by their tea-kettle and walking about the room. It bothered them very much by its pranks, being part of the time a useful and sober culinary utonsil and partly a mis-chievous badger. Catching it and shutting it up in a box, they sold it to a traveling tinker for a triffe, thinktinker, though sorely affrighted when he found what a bargain he had gotten, shrewdly put his bewitched tea-kettle to good account. He traveled far and wide exhibiting his wonderful benst, which diligently performed on the slack-rope. Princes and nobles the slack-rope. Princes and nobles The subscribe having become proprietor of came in throngs to see his show; and this botel, would respectfully ask a liberal share so he made himself very rich by his anique entertainment. The lucky tinker and his accomplished tea kettle furnish forth adventures for the Japanese play-goer as numerous and various as those of our own Humpty Dum-pty, dear to the heart of every Englishspeaking child. On the reverse of another fan you discover an illustra-tion of fairy lore. A hare and badger, grotesquely dressed in watermen's garb, are each paddling about in bonts Charges moderate, on a small sheet of water. They Sept. 28, 1870-tf. glare at each other defiantly, but the bare, notwithstanding he keeps his simple expression, seems to have the advantage of the other. The hare and the badger in the story of The Crackling Mountain, were old foes, and had many a tussle, in which the hare usually got the better of his adversary. Finally the hare, having built a wood on boat, set off on a voyage to the capital of the moon, inviting his enemy to accompany him. The wary badger refused, but building a boat of clay he followed the hare. The waves washed the clay so that it began to dissolve; then the hare, paddling his craft full upon the luckless badger, crashed his sinking boat, and the wicked animal perished miserably in the waters. children. It was yesterday, and that lad was playing with tops-a buoyant boy. He is a man, and gone now! His foot is in the field, his band is upon the sword. There is no more childhood for him or for us. Life has claimed him. When a beginning is made, it is like a ravelling stockingstitch by stitch gives way, till all are gone. The bouse has not a child in There is no more noise in the hall -the boys rushing in pell mell-it is very orderly now. There are no more skates or sleds, bats, balls, or strings left scattered about.

Things are neat enough now. There is no delay of breakfast for sleepy folks; there is no longer any task be fore you lie down, of looking after anybody and tucking up the bed clothes. There are no disputes to set-tle, nobody to get off to school, no complaints, no importunities for impossible things, no rips to mend, no finger to tie up, no faces to be washed, or collars to be arranged; there was never such peace in the house! It would sound like music to have some feet clatter down the front stairs! Oh, for some children's noise!

What used to ail us that we were hushing their loud laugh, cheeking their noisy frolies, and reproving their shamming and banging the doors!— We wish our neighbors would only lend us an urchin or two to make a little noise in these premises. A house without children! It is like a lantern and no candle !- a garden and no flowers !- a vine and no grapes !- a brook with no water gurgling and rushing in its channel! We want to be tired, be vexed, to be run over, to hear child life at work with all its varieties. During the socular days this is enough marked. But it is Sunday that puts an American bouse to proof. This is the Christian family day. The inter-vals of public worship are long spaces of peace. The family seems made up on that day. The children are at home. You can lay your hand on their heads. They seem to recognize the greater and the less love-to God and to frierds. The house is pence-ful, but not still. There is a low and melodious thrill of children in it. But Sunday comes too still now. There is silence that aches in the ear. There is too much room at the table, too much at the hearth. The bed-rooms are a word too orderly. There is too much leisure and too little care Alas! what mean these things? Is somebody growing old? Are these signs and tokens? Is life waning?
