

GEORGE B. GOODLANDER,

CLEARFIELD, PA. WEDNESDAY MORNING, OCT. 29, 1873.

A Dissutisfied Spirit.

The political economist who presides over the columns of the Osccola Reveille seems to hold some antipathy against our county prison. Well, there are no doubt others like him. It is a terror to evil doers generally .-The high taxes trouble him wonderfully, too. A glance at the duplicates reveals the fact that he has paid within the past three years two dollars and sixty cents county tax, and when discounted averages about eighty-two cents a year. If his other taxes are high he should lay the blame "at the ing fault with the Assessor and right office door," and not insinuate that the County Commissioners and themselves this question : "How may the Assessors are the authors of high more correctly would I have discharg taxes.
