Dry Goods, Groceries, Etc. THE REPUBLICAN, CLEARFIELD, PA. WEDNESDAY MORNING APRIL 8, 1874.

On a summer eve, when the sun was low, An old man sat in the golden glow, His hands were resting on his knees, And his eyes were turned to the setting seas.

Left—All alone with the dreary past; A battered bill on the chimney cast, No more to take on the evening main, No more to shake on the storm again.

Everybody rejoices when a laxy fellow is compelled to work. It gives superior satisfaction to see an habitual slacker effectually cornered.

THE REPUBLICAN. The Sanborn Case. The following from the New York Tribune presents the law and the facts in the moiety cases so plainly, that we give it without abbreviation.

When the House of Representatives last February called upon the Secretary of the Treasury for the documents bearing upon the contracts made under his law, Mr. Richardson strangely kept back some important papers of which we have just obtained knowledge.

Everybody rejoices when a laxy fellow is compelled to work. It gives superior satisfaction to see an habitual slacker effectually cornered.

It is supposed to be on this principle that all those good, sensible, practical people who consider poetry the natural property of a superior intellect, and who seem to put it to some homely use, and seem to delight in seeing it harnessed down to a plain, healthy moral, or made to express a geographical or meteorological fact.

His children are taught their first lessons of thrift in the compleat— "See a pin, and let it lie; And you shall find it look all day; And all day you'll have good luck; And all day you'll have good luck."

As often as there is a funeral in his family, he searches the hymn-book for a rhyme to be placed on the tombstone; and if the event calls out a few original stanzas from some local muse, the rhyme is preserved forever in the family scrap-book.

But more troublesome to remember than dates, facts, and geographical statistics, yet more mortifying to forget, are the elaborate requirements of etiquette. The compleat victory of those who lash solid facts to buoyant poetry, that the whole may float gracefully in the memory, has been achieved by a genius who reduces the whole science to plain rules, and puts every rule in rhyme. Lander's compleat— "That man is foolish who supposes Those dogs are ill that have hot noses."

The world-wide discussion on the proper use of the knife and fork is all summed up and settled by this suggestive passage: "If you should, in a moment rash, Reverse their use, perhaps you'd gash A mouth already far too wide, And shock all who might see inside. And let the souls of Eve and Adam, Eat in the souls of Eve and Adam."

Brush Your Teeth.—The causes of the decay of the teeth are two—acid and a minute fungus, abundantly found in the mouth. All acids, both vegetable and mineral, act promptly on the teeth by dissolving the enamel and by softening the dentine.

THE MATCHES WE USE. HOW, AND OF WHAT THEY ARE MADE. The sticks of which matches are made are brought from Canada, where the making of them is a separate business.

Anecdotes About Dogs. A dog belonging to a gentleman who lived near Chester was in the habit of not only going to church, but remaining quietly in the pew during service, whether the master was there or not.

Two powerful dogs were often seen on the pier at Doncaster. One was a Newfoundland and the other a mastiff. They were both powerful dogs, and though each was good natured when left alone, they were very much in the habit of fighting when they met.
